'Partially' Identifies 2d Criminal; Hunt Begins for Suspect In Oxon Hill Case

Mary Brown, 18-year-old Oxon Hill, Md., girl who was kidnaped and tortured for 30 hours by three abductors, last night "positively identified" one known police character and partially identified a second in an examination of the "rogues' gallery" at police headquarters here.

"I know him! I know him! That's the one," Mary exclaimed, after several minutes of fruitless inspection of the photographic file. The tentative identification was made with the remark, "That looks like one of them."

"First Real Clue"

Maj. Elmer Munshower, Maryland police chief in charge of the investigation, termed the development "our first real clue."

"I hope we can go to town on this," he added.

Maryland police, directed by Maj. Munshower, immediately renewed their search of shacks near the Brown home where the men might be in hiding.

Identification was made as Mary checked through pictures of former criminals in a special file after similar inspection of the kidnap and holdup lists brought no results.

3 Suspects Exonerated

Mary arrived at police headquarters last night with her father, William Brown, Government employe, after she had previously failed to identify three suspects picked up Sunday in the Southeast area by Detective Watson Salkeld of Fifth Precinct.

Capt. Ira Keck, assistant chief of detectives, at first denied the girl had recognized the photographs, but later admitted the identification.

Out for First Time

Mary left her home yesterday for the first time since December 1, when her abductors released her after starving and beating her for 30 hours in a hideaway shack.

Supt. Arthur W. Hepburn, of Prince Georges County police, questioned her briefly yesterday, but she was unable to throw any new light on the case.

Mary was kidnaped on a road near her home by three men who threw her into a black-bodied truck. Her 15-year-old sister, Lucy, escaped by running into the woods.

Ex-Blues Singer Shot Twice Here by Mystery Gunman

A former "blues" singer was wounded here twice last night by a mysterious gunman who made no attempt to rob her, although a witness said he muttered, "This is a holdup," and then fired away.

Mrs. Adele Cinnman, who sang here on the stage several years ago under the name of Adele Simmons, told police she had just closed the door of her beauty shop at 411 Eighteenth street northeast when she turned around and saw the assailant shoot twice at her. The bullets entered her arm.

Miss Ida Cobb, of 900 Quincy street northeast, who was with Mrs. Cinnman, told police that the colored man had first warned it was a hold-up; but the victim said she had heard no such remark. The gunman fled to a waiting car after the shooting.

Police pointed out that Mrs. Cinnman had the day's receipts in her purse and said the assailant had been waiting around the store for some time.

She and her husband arrived in Washington only 10 days ago and set up the beauty parlor. They make their home at 4615 Fifth street northwest.

George Burns Pleads Guilty to Smuggling

Radio Star Says He Bought Contraband Bracelets for 'Gracie'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 12.—George Burns, whose air of resigned indignation at the cheerful grotesqueries of "Gracie" Allen has amused radio audiences for years, stood pale and distrait in Federal court today and pleaded guilty to charges of jewelry smuggling.

Burns, the husband of Miss Allen and the "straight man" to her characterizations of a vague and "dumb" female, was released immediately without bond.

Government counsel said he was subject to possible maximum penalties of 18 years' imprisonment and fines totaling $45,000 under the nine counts in two indictments against him, despite the fact the offenses were defined in the statute as misdemeanors.

Assistant United States Attorney Joseph V. Delaney asked consideration for the comedian because he had co-operated with the Government in a broad investigation of smuggling which began with a raid late in October on the Park avenue apartment of Mrs. Edgar Lauer, wife of a State Supreme Court justice, by Treasury agents in search of smuggled Parisian knick-knacks and finery.

GEORGE BURNS, telling it to the judge.

Burns declined to say whether he would testify for the prosecution against his accused co-defendants, Albert N. Chaperau, the "mystery man" of the whole affair, and a woman known variously as Paula Gheyskens, Paula Mahoney and Paula Chaperau. She was named in only one indictment.

Specifically, Burns was indicted for the smuggling of two bracelets and a ring, valued by the Government at $4,885.

Burns was accused of abetting evasion of customs duties and of

Labor Board Loses Plea for 'Mutiny' Crew

Supreme Court Refuses To Review Strike of 145 CIO Seamen

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court yesterday thwarted an effort of the National Labor Relations Board to reinstate 145 seamen who were discharged after two ships had been seized in sit-down strikes.

Without explaining its action, the court refused a board request that it review a decision of the Fifth Federal Circuit Court, which set aside a board order requiring reinstatement of the men.

Missouri Court Overruled

The high court also ruled that the University of Missouri should admit Lloyd Gaines, colored, to its school of law.

Missouri provides separate schools for colored students, including Lincoln University at Jefferson City. In addition, it provides for payment of tuition at schools in adjacent States for colored students who wish to study subjects at schools for whites but not given at their own institutions.

The Missouri Supreme Court upheld a ruling that the scholarship provision was adequate.

In the labor board case the board order had been directed against the Peninsular & Occidental Steamship Co.

Second NLRB Setback.

It was the second setback within as many weeks for the National Labor Relations Board. The court ruled last Monday that the board had exceeded its authority in ordering cancellation of contracts between American Federation of Labor unions and the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York. As in that case, the American Federation of Labor appeared in opposition to the board in the proceedings ended yesterday.

In the steamship dispute, the National Labor Relations Board ordered the strikers reinstated with back pay. It contended the men were discharged because they joined and assisted the National Maritime Union, a C. I. O. affiliate.

'Patent Firm' Admits Ruling Bottle Makers

Industry 'Stabilized' By License System, Trust Inquiry Told

By Robert C. Allright.

How one closely held company through patents has built a virtual monopoly of modern glass container machinery and controls use of the machines and often quantity of their product, yesterday was related to the President's Monopoly Committee.

F. G. Smith, president of the Hartford-Empire Co., and A. T. Safford, jr., his youthful secretary-counsel, said their company has used this power through selective licensing to "stabilize" production, prevent "ruinous competition" and to assure payment of license fees and royalties.

Makes First Admission

"If they didn't pay us royalties they couldn't use our machinery, and then they would be out of business," Smith told the committee.

"That's the first time you've admitted glass container manufacturers would be out of business if they didn't use your machinery," said Hugh Cox, Justice Department attorney conducting the inquiry.

Earlier Smith testified under questioning that anyone desiring to enter the glass container manufacturing industry must either obtain a license from Hartford-Empire Co. or use an older "suction feed" method suited only to a limited number of products.

Legality Unchallenged

Cox asked if the company did not have "virtually a monopoly" over modern feeding, forming and Lehr cooling processes used in the glass container industry. Smith agreed that "as far as those particular types of machines are concerned our company does have a monopoly, which is, of course, the monopoly given us by the patents."

At no time did Cox or members of the committee challenge the legality of controls under which both Smith and Safford testified that Hartford-Empire decides which companies are to be licensed under

Job Waiting, Father Needs Bond To Take It and Save Sick Girl

Many Washingtonians already this year have made the problem of some less fortunate family in the community less acute by contributions to The Post's Neediest Families Fund. Each of these "neediest families" has been carefully investigated and especially recommended by a member agency of the District of Columbia Council of Social Agencies. Read the story presented today and decide if you can help.

When the doctor told Mr. and Mrs. X that their 8-year-old daughter Joan was the victim of an illness caused by malnutrition, that she must have special foods and a long rest, their hearts fell.

Where would they get the money to buy such foods, with an income of only $10 a week? And how long would it be before another child—aged 4, already becoming pale and listless—fell prey to the same illness.

Mr. X has had work that paid him more than the $10 a week he now receives.

Formerly he was a competent truck driver. Three years ago he lost his job. Since then, he has been unable to secure regular employment at the work he knows best and has taken whatever he could find.

And for three years he has kept his family together. They have had no money for small luxuries—but they have had a roof over

Paid to Hide, Says Army Probe Evader

Speicher Testifies He Was Warned to Stay Out of Capital, And Received $900

By Dillard Stokes.

The hair-raising Mystery of the Missing Witness—in which money passed in little blue envelopes and people called "Dr. O'Brien," "Capt. John Smith" and "Grampaw," met mysteriously in telephone booths—opened in District court yesterday.

The melodrama had the form of a trial for criminal conspiracy, in which Joseph Silverman, jr., his brother, Nathan, and former Brig. Gen. Alexander E. Williams are accused of obstructing justice by hiding a witness from the House Military Affairs Committee.

Testifying when court suspended until 10 a. m. today was the missing witness himself—Frank E. (Capt. John Smith) Speicher, who was doing his best to fill the role assigned to him by Irvin Goldstein, special assistant to the Attorney General. When Goldstein retired as assistant District attorney he was designated to complete the prosecution.

Artichoke Farm Mentioned

Williams, the Silvermans and former Representative Thomas Jefferson Ryan are accused of plotting to hide Speicher so he wouldn't tell a Congressional committee about the $4,500 he lent the general to lift the mortgage on the general's artichoke farm in North Carolina. That, Speicher testified, was what the loans were for.

Silver - haired, gentle - mannered Justice Proctor directed a swift questioning of veniremen when court sat yesterday. Thirteen were excused and 12 entered the box. Not a challenge did Goldstein and Assistant District Attorney Krouse, his co-prosecutor, employ.

Attorneys William E. Leahy and Frank Aranow, of New York, counsel for the Silvermans, announced they didn't want to challenge either. Neither did Attorney Robert E. Lynch, who is defending Gen. Williams.

Jurors Quickly Sworn

William Adam, 30, draftsman, 2000 Connecticut avenue northwest; Frederick A. Allnut, 34, realty man, 2932 Porter street northwest; James Armstrong, 34, automobile salesman, 1734 Massachusetts avenue northwest; Canton R. Brent, 37, printer, colored, 2209 Fourteenth street northwest; Edwin L. Burdette, 29, elevator operator, 431 Twelfth street southeast; Cyrus A. Cannon, 51, realty salesman, 3240 Thirty-eighth street northwest; Mrs. Lorraine H. Ives, 38, housewife, 2018 P street northwest; Richard W. Conway, 30, buildin_ supplies, 3351 Tennyson street northwest; Ferdinand Espey, 54, bookkeeper, 922 Longfellow street northwest; Leo E. Falk, 26, clothing store manager, 5156 Fulton street northwest, and George Frager, 33, of 1115 Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Pensioner Excused

Excused because he receives a pension from the Government was Lucas W. Catlett, 50, of 4704 Seventeenth street northwest, who runs a riding school.

Goldstein then unfolded the Government's version of the mystery of the missing witness. Speicher came to Washington in 1932 to sell inner tubes, said Goldstein, when Gen. Williams was in the office of the quartermaster general of the Red Stripes Show 20-Minute Parking Meters

Red stripes have been painted on the parking meters downtown that limit parking to only 20 minutes, William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, said yesterday.

Van Duzer said there had been several complaints from motorists who received tickets for overtime parking at the meters which restrict to only 20 minutes.

"The red stripes will identify these meters, which are near banks, and probably will bring an end to the complaints about them," the traffic director said.

$2,000,000 Is Asked to Extend Parks

29 Items Listed in Report; Biggest Is For Playground on Columbia Road

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday submitted to the District Commissioners a $2,000,000 plan for acquisition of playgrounds, parks and recreational centers in various sections of the city.

Justification for the expenditure, which would be included in 1940 budget estimates, was offered to the commissioners by Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the commission; John Nolen, jr., director of planning; Arno B. Cammerer, executive officer, and T. S. Settle, secretary.

A sum of $300,000 for the Columbia road playground, at Belmont road, was the largest single item requested by the commission. The tract of land was described as "partly wooded" and in a neighborhood where play facilities "practically do not exist." The commission said agents recently have indicated the property can be bought at a reasonable price and that its development with apartment houses "is likely in the near future."

Georgetown Item Second

Additional recreation facilities for children in the Georgetown-Burleith-Glover Park neighborhood to be provided by acquisition of the square west of Western High School at a cost of $225,750 was urged by the commission.

The commission requested $128,799 for the remainder of land which is needed to complete the Mid-City Playground, north of New York avenue near Sixth street northwest. The commission said a playground for this congested area "is highly desirable at this time especially in view of the imminence of a neighboring housing project undertaken by the Alley Dwelling Authority."

$242,427 for Southwest

An item for $87,932 was requested to complete acquisition of row houses on the north side of Lamont street, in the Columbia Heights section, for a playground. This item will complete the unit, it was said.

For the Southwest Recreation Center, the commission requested $242,427. This amount supplements initial appropriations made last year and will permit completing acquisition of two squares north of the Jefferson Junior High School site between Seventh and Ninth streets southwest. The school is planned to be completed in February, 1940.

Under the Capper-Crampton act of 1930, the commission was authorized to spend $16,000,000 for acquisition of land to be converted into parks and recreation grounds. A total of $6,500,000 already has been appropriated by Congress for this purpose.

29 Items Are Listed

The commissioners are expected to decide at their board meeting today how much of the $2,000,000 plan they will approve to the Budget Bureau.

All told, the commission listed 29 items. Others included were:

Northeast Washington recreation center, $32,088. Citizen groups of this section of the city have advocated a playground for many years.

Oxon Run Parkway, $35,267. This item provides for an extension of the original project to include all land frequently flooded, based on surveys and studies in co-operation with the District government as a

District WPA Roll To Be Cut by 800 Within 4 Weeks

Ross Haworth, assistant District administrator, revealed yesterday that the WPA rolls here must be reduced by 800 within the next four weeks, bringing the roster down to about 11,500.

Haworth pointed out, however, that the reduction would not necessarily mean dropping all 800 enrollees, since 100 or more persons are leaving the WPA to take jobs in private industry each week. Special efforts will be taken, he said, to preserve jobs of those with dependents when the cut is made.

Officials of the Workers Alliance have protested against any move to decrease the number of WPA jobs.

Eden to Talk Today After He Sees Roosevelt

Record Crowd, Cabinet To Hear Him Speak at Press Club Luncheon

Anthony Eden, dynamic former foreign secretary of Great Britain, will arrive in Washington early this morning for a brief visit.

A call on President Roosevelt, an "off the record" luncheon talk to the National Press Club and a trip to Annapolis are on his hurried program.

Arriving at 7:15 a. m., with Mrs. Eden and a party of five guests, he will be escorted to the White House later in the morning by Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles.

Tickets Sold Out

The entire Cabinet present in the city will attend the Press Club luncheon for him at noon, the first time in the history of the club that such an attendance has been recorded. High officials of the State Department and representatives of the British Embassy also will be present, Harold Brayman, club president, said.

So great was the rush for luncheon tickets that the entire allotment of more than 400 was sold in little more than an hour and many members learned with consternation that they would be unable to get seats. Of the club membership of 1,100, approximately 700 were unable to obtain admission.

Brayman announced that the club quarters will be closed to guests from 11 a. m. to 3 p. m., to avoid confusion during the capacity gathering.

U. S. Weighs Loans to Spur Latin Trade

Morgenthau Reveals Study of Ways to Boost Purchases Here

By the Associated Press.

The idea of lending Latin America cash out of the United States Treasury with which to buy more goods from this country is being given consideration here.

This disclosure, made yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, demonstrated how seriously the Administration is courting Latin America in view of economic inroads made in that quarter of the world by totalitarians from overseas.

Morgenthau told reporters he was seeking means of greater commercial solidarity in the Western Hemisphere while Secretary of State Hull, at the Pan-American conference at Lima, is seeking a common front against military and political aggressors. Hull, the Treasury added, has complete knowledge of his commercial studies and approves them.

European Loans Now Barred

Not since the first few years after the World War has Congress permitted Treasury money to be lent to a foreign government. All those loans were made in Europe and all of them are in default except the small one to Finland. Those countries cannot even borrow from private investors in this country because of the Johnson act.

None of the Latin American countries, however, owes the Treasury any money, although several of them have borrowed extensively from private investors in this country. When the depression sent a large part of the Latin American securities into default, private loans from this country largely dried up and only Argentina has borrowed here in the last few years.

Silver Buying Aids Mexico

In the first 10 months of this year, sales of American goods to Latin America amounted to $520,000,000, compared with $2,711,067,000 to the world as a whole. In the same period the United States bought $622,000,000 from Latin

Means Dies Refusing to Tell Wife Where He Hid $104,000

Gaston B. Means refused to make a death-bed confession to his wife of the hiding place of the $104,000 which he swindled from Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean in the Lindbergh baby hoax, it was learned authoritatively last night.

The one-time Justice Department agent, who abandoned a once promising career for crime, took the secret with him to the grave.

Means died yesterday in the hospital of the Federal prison at Springfield, Mo., following a relapse Sunday from a gall bladder operation performed early last week.

Mrs. Julie Means, his wife, who was at his bedside when he died, tried unsuccessfully in his last moments to persuade him to reveal the hiding place of the money, according to reliable reports reaching here.

Federal Bureau of Investigation officials hoped, until the time of his death, that Means would break down at last and make known the secret, it was learned, but he maintained an obstinate silence to the end.

For more than six years Justice Department agents have tracked down every clew as to where the marked money might be concealed. So far as can be ascertained they still are at the point they started from, except that a number of possibilities have been eliminated.

Inquiry developed that the department will continue the search, although Means' death admittedly is a blow to any possibility of success. His reported refusal to tell his wife the hiding place of the money was taken to indicate he alone knew the secret.

Agents searched the Means home on Leland street, Chevy Chase, and

Hull's Plan at Lima

By the United Press.

Lima, Peru, Dec. 12.—The United States, in agreement with Argentina, today drafted a forceful warning by the eighth Pan-American Conference that the 21 American republics will act jointly against foreign armed aggression or attempts to implant undemocratic systems in the Western Hemisphere.

The declaration, which in effect will give a multilateral character to the Monroe Doctrine, was made possible after United States Secretary of State Hull and Foreign Minister Cantilo of Argentina had reconciled the viewpoints of their countries regarding continental defense.

Mexicans Ask Delay

Hull bowed to Argentine demands that no formal pact or alliance be offered the conference, and Cantilo agreed to support a resolution embodying the principle of inter-American defense against foreign attacks or attempts to subvert American political institutions.

Hull immediately began to revise his original draft of a pact to put it in the form of a declaration which will retain much of the force of the initial United States project.

It was learned from an authoritative source that the declaration would not be submitted to the conference until the middle of the week at the request of the Mexican delegates, who desire to review it carefully.

Provides Consultation

The Mexicans and Argentines have been charged with obtaining the support of other delegations for the declaration in order to harmonize all viewpoints and assure unanimous support for the project when it is offered to the conference.

As finally agreed upon, the declaration will represent all America and will embody virtually all the main points of Hull's first draft. Besides repudiating armed aggression and political propagandizing, the declaration was expected to contain provision for periodic meetings of the foreign ministers of the American republics to consult with each other regarding matters of mutual interest.

Hull and Cantilo conferred shortly after noon on the points to be included in the declaration. It was understood Hull would remain in permanent contact with the Argentine delegation for any matters on which the Argentines may desire to consult.

When the declaration is drafted it will be referred to the committee on the organization of peace, headed by Afranio Mello Franco, of Brazil, and which includes former Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas as United States representative. The committee began its deliberations this

Alumni to Honor Roberts and Gates

Justice Owen J. Roberts and Dr. Thomas S. Gates, president of the University of Pennsylvania, will be honor guests at a reception tomorrow in conjunction with a celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the University of Pennsylvania Club of the District.

A dinner will be given at 7:30 p. m. at the Brook Farm Tea House, 6501 Brookville road, Chevy Chase, Md., at which the Rev. W. J. Thompson, of New York, and Dr. J. Bartlett Hills, two of the four living founders of the club, will be present.

The reception for Justice Roberts and Dr. Gates will be held at the residence of Dr. Frank Schultz, adjoining the tea house.

George F. Snyder, of Washington, is chairman of the committee on arrangements. Baltimore alumni of the university will participate.

Reorganization To Be Sought 'Piecemeal'

New Dealers Agree on Strategy; Roosevelt to Send Special Message

By the United Press.

Administration leaders yesterday agreed tentatively to revive President Roosevelt's explosive Government reorganization program at the coming session of Congress, but on a piecemeal basis so as to weaken bipartisan opposition.

The Chief Executive is said to approve the strategy and is expected to send a special message on the subject.

The maneuver was decided upon, it was learned, after Mr. Roosevelt's advisers told him frankly that there is no chance for enactment of an omnibus bill covering the program. It was the President's insistence on such a bill last session that caused a House coalition to kill it.

Byrnes Is Hopeful

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, chairman of the special Senate Reorganization Committee, and Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri), head of the House reorganization bloc, predicted yesterday that the program "will have a much better chance" if broken down into individual bills, probably four of them.

The House bills provide:

Power for the President to reorganize all except quasi-judicial agencies such as the Federal Trade Commission, subject to Congressional approval. Creation of a new Department of Welfare in the Cabinet.

Establishment of an auditor general to pass on Federal expenditures and report to Congress. This office would dominate the comptroller general's office.

Appointment of six $10,000 a year administrative assistants to the President.

Creation of a civil service administrator, appointed by the President, to supplant the present bipartisan board.

Says Bill Was Weapon

"If we had done it on this basis before, we would have had Government reorganization last session," Cochran said. "The omnibus bill enabled a lot of people who wanted to discredit the President to use reorganization as a weapon, and some even tried to hook it up with the Supreme Court bill."

Representative Robinson (Democrat), Utah, another member of the House Committee, agreed with Cochran's views and said that "everybody wants reorganization in the interest of efficiency and economy."

"The Republicans will oppose voting any further control to Mr. Roosevelt," Representative Wolcott (Republican), Michigan, said. "My personal view is that Congress should pass a resolution asking the President to submit his plans on a piece-by-piece basis. Then Congress should pass on them."

Resigned Officer Denied Bonus In Test Case

A test case to determine the status under the bonus act of former provisional officers who resigned their commissions after the World War was decided yesterday in an opinion by Chief Justice Groner of the United States Court of Appeals, denying a former Army lieutenant a writ of mandamus to compel Secretary Woodring to issue him a bonus certificate.

The appellant, Philip W. Lowry, of New York City, whose suit for a writ was denied in District Court after he had applied several times to the War Department for a certificate, said more than 3,000 former provisional officers would be affected by Justice Groner's ruling.

The Court of Appeals sustained the War Department's interpretation of a provision of the bonus act that officers not discharged from the Army attained a permanent status and are excluded from adjusted compensation.

Three Wyoming Natives Reunited at Hearing

A reunion of three Wyoming natives took place yesterday when Sheridan Downey, Democratic Senator-elect from California, stepped into the monopoly hearing and was greeted by Thurman Arnold (left) assistant attorney general, and Senator O'Mahoney, chairman. Arnold and Downey originally are from Laramie and went to school together at the University of Wyoming. O'Mahoney is from Cheyenne

Downey Backs Pension Boost, End of WPA

Senator-elect Drops 'Ham and Eggs;' Urges Spread of New Credits

Charging the WPA is "demoralizing the Nation," Sheridan Downey, California's newly elected "ham and eggs" Senator, declared yesterday Federal work relief must be replaced by pensions for America's "senior citizens."

"The WPA must go," he said as he advocated an increase of purchasing power through "direct distribution of new credits by the Government." He mentioned the printing of additional currency as a possible means to that end.

He declared that "I have no idea of proposing such a specific measure as the California pension plan on a national scale."

Envisioning a "steadily increasing crisis," Downey declared new Federal borrowing of "five or six billions a year" can continue only a few years longer. That sum "has to be lifted to eight or nine billions" to restore full prosperity, he said, but it should be "directly released by the Federal Government" without the "intervention of our present banking system."

Downey asserted that "we ought to double wages and pay $100 a month to people past 50 or 60 in order to get out the purchasing power.

"People in Washington don't realize the despair and misery of farmers and businessmen throughout the country," he declared.

Soon after his arrival, he was taken on a tour of the Senate wing of the Capitol by Col. Edward M. Halsey, secretary of the Senate.

Japanese to Extend Chinese Air Line

Shanghai, Dec. 12 (AP).—Takeo Saito, president of the Japan Aviation Co., said yesterday the air line's capitalization soon would be increased to 100,000,000 yen ($27,200,000).

Saito said the new financing would be used to extend the company's services between Tokyo, Shanghai, Taihoku, capital of Formosa, and Hsinking, capital of Manchoukuo, and for the purchase of five new 24-passenger transport planes.

result of the serious floods of 1937. This would complete the project.

Oxon Run recreation center, $4,520. This project is co-ordinated with the Oxon Run Parkway project and the commission suggests the land be acquired at the same time.

Battery Ricketts, $899. This item requested to complete project, which adjoins Fort Stanton Park.

Would Protect View

Fort Drive, Section M, $14,700. The commission said the current subdivision and development of property adjoining the orphan asylum makes this acquisition urgent; this hillside strip adjoining the Fort Drive is "absolutely essential" to protect one of the best views of the river, Capitol and city along the entire route of the Fort Drive, they said.

Rock Creek Park north of Blagden avenue, $58,912; acquisition of this property has been proposed by the commission for many years.

Anacostia Park, Section F, Sports Center, $85,000; squares on both sides of East Capitol street, overlooking sports center in Section F of Anacostia Park.

Saving on Storm Sewers

Anacostia Park, Section E, $8,327; the commission said the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge improvement makes this acquisition opportune; properties to be acquired would eliminate necessity of opening Davidson street, "which makes a very bad intersection with Pennsylvania avenue at the bridge approach."

Piney Branch, east of Sixteenth street, $16,896; this would complete the project.

Pope Branch Valley, $5,000; the commission said the acquisition of this 10-acre valley at a cost of $5,000 would eliminate necessity for constructing an $80,000 storm sewer.

Soapstone Valley, $17,255; this would complete project.

Watts Branch Parkway, $35,273; the commission stated Open Valley park treatment of the flood problem is estimated to save the District $1,500,000 in cost of storm sewer.

Fort Drive, Section A, $31,891; involves three properties: Those on Loughboro road are held essential to carry out an adequate roadway intersection plan of Fort Drive with Nebraska avenue and to close Lowell street, the commission explained; unimproved property at Conduit road is included.

Fort Reno Park, $223,352

Fort Drive, Section H, $8,078; intersection of the Fort Drive with Bladensburg road at Eastern avenue.

Palisades Park, $65,639; properties between Thirty-seventh street and Foxhall road overlooking the C. & O. Canal.

Barry Farm playground, $9,235; frontage along Nichols avenue; Fort Dupont connecting parkway addition, $39,741; for widening parkway between Fort Dupont Park and Anacostia Park; this would enable connection of the proposed nine-hole golf course in Fort Dupont Park with the golf course in Anacostia Park, making 18 holes in all.

Fort drive, Section F, $25,000; this would complete the project.

Fort Reno Park recreation center, $223,352; properties opposite Wodorow Wilson and Alice Deal high schools, for completion of project.

Bureau of Standards Valley, east of Connecticut avenue, $128,781. This project was described as "a deep wooded valley containing a perennial stream flowing into Rock Creek" for use as park.

Aid to Congress Heights

Anacostia Park, Section G, $12,460; acquisition of the lily ponds and development plans for extension of Aanacostia Park into Maryland, for both of which funds were appropriated by the last Congress, indicate the necessity for revising the boundary line of Aanacostia Park between the lily ponds and the District Line in order to safeguard springs feeding the lily ponds.

Area between Bolling Field and Bellevue, $11,022; close gap in public ownership between the flying field and Bellevue Magazine.

Hoover Playground, $23,583; this acquisition has been requested by the Southwest Citizens Association and the Citywide Playground Council to eliminate slum housing occupied by colored residents, overlooking a white playground and preventing the carrying out of an efficient plan of development.

Congress Heights Playground, $35,632; the commission said 500 children in this vicinity recently petitioned it for a playground.

Incentive Tax Urged to Spur Rail Spending

Carriers Could Spend 1 Billion a Year on Equipment, Group Told

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Profit-Sharing Committee heard testimony yesterday that incentive taxation might help loosen a tremendous backlog of railroad equipment purchases that would put 500,000 men to work in the heavy industries.

R. V. Fletcher, general counsel for the Association of American Railroads, said the carriers should spend $1,000,000,000 a year for the next ten years for modernization, replacement and repair.

But before the railroads can do this, he added, they must squeeze about $4,000,000,000 out of their top-heavy capital structure.

The witness agreed with Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, committee member, that much progress could be made toward reducing the class 1 railroads' $11,250,000,000 bonded debt if the Government waived income tax requirements on the "paper profits" that would accrue to the roads if they bought these outstanding bonds at their present market value of about $7,250,000,000.

Fletcher suggested also that the railroads be excused from paying undistributed profits taxes on the money they put into new equipment.

The railroad counsel expressed hope that the adoption of some such principle of incentive taxation might lead to the States, which collect the major share of taxes from the carriers, to reduce taxes on roads which expand their equipment.

"I think there is no doubt," he said, "that if the railroads could have continued to buy as much equipment and materials through the depression as previously, there would have been no necessity for the tremendous relief expenditures that have been made."

Christmas Seal Drive Is Boosted

Two appeals for support of the Christmas seal sales campaign of the Tuberculosis Association were made yesterday by leaders in health and social welfare activities.

Willard C. Smith, vice president of theassociation, recited the history of the fight against tuberculosis and cited the need for extension of free X-ray service, rehabilitation work for the patients, and continued operation of the Bald Eagle camp for tubercular children.

Ross Garrett, director of the Health Security Administration, speaking over Station WRC, urged extension of the X-ray service to all groups of workers from 15 to 25.

Martin of Colorado, Veteran of Half a Dozen Congresses, Won't Run Again in 1940

Representative Martin (Democrat), Colorado, said yesterday "I have definitely made up my mind not to run in 1940."

REP. J. A. MARTIN

The 71-year-old legislator said he had no definite plans after he retires from Congress.

The Pueblo lawyer said he plans to reintroduce a bill to abolish the long and short haul clause in the interstate commerce act, a "dollar matching" pension measure that would increase the Federal Government's monthly contributions from $15 to $25, and legislation directing the Federal Trade Commission to investigate the manufacturer-dealer relationship in the tire industry.

He has served in the sixty-first sixty-second, seventy-third, seventy-fourth and seventy-fifth Congresses

And I've been a Republican all my life, too."

Senator Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota, announced yesterday he had a new grandson. The child was born yesterday to the Senator's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon A. Frazier. The father is a clerk in the Senator's office.

Representatives of the Federation of arts unions delivered to the White House yesterday a protest against orders for a reduction of the number of persons employed on Federal arts projects. The delegation said 1,500 out of 8,400 persons so employed in New York would lose their jobs.

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—A conference of national Republican leaders called for today by the Independent Citizens League to make plans for the 1940 Presidential campaign has been postponed until some time late in January. Officials said the meeting probably would be held in Washington.

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 12 (AP).—Roger W. Babson, widely known business forecaster and economist, told interviewers today the Tennessee Valley Authority "is absolutely one of the best New Deal projects."

Referring to the current Congressional investigation of the authority, Babson commented:

"That investigation they're having is just Republican politics.

Dabney Says State Must Make New Provison After Court Ruling

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 12.—Virginius Dabney, editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, said tonight the United States Supreme Court's ruling today that a State must provide "equality" in educational privileges for white and colored law students left Virginia with these alternatives:

To develop graduate and professional instruction at the State College for colored students at Petersburg at a "cost of a good deal of money."

To admit colored students to institutions of higher learning which heretofore have been exclusively for whites.

The second course, Dabney said, would be harmful to racial relations in Virginia.

The 1936 Virginia General Assembly authorized Virginia institutions which deny admission to qualified colored applicants to aid these students in getting instruction outside the State by paying "such sum . . . as may be necessary to supplement the amount which it would cost such person to attend the said State college, university or institution."

A somewhat similar plan has been followed by Missouri, but Chief Justice Hughes today held this was a denial of the legal rights of Lloyd L. Gaines, of St. Louis.

"The provision for the payment of tuition fees in another State does not remove the discrimination," the court held.

The last similar case in Virginia was that of Alice Jackson, of Richmond, a graduate of Virginia Union University here, who applied in 1935 to the University of Virginia for the right to take the university's postgraduate modern language course. Her application was denied, but the case was never carried to court.

Mayer's Mother's Trial Continues

Seattle, Dec. 12 (AP).—The first degree murder trial of Mrs. Mary Eleanor Smith, 73, continued in Superior Court today despite the suicide yesterday of her son and co-defendant, Decasto Earl Mayer, 44.

The two were charged with murdering James Eugene Bassett, of Annapolis, Md., Navy civilian employe, near here ten years ago. The body never was found.

Youth Today Often Too Keen for Own Good, Says Father Flanagan, 'Boys Town' Founder

The boy of today is a "wise guy," a fact which indicates the citizens of tomorrow should be outstanding for their level-headedness, Father Flanagan, of Boys Town, Omaha, Nebr., said here yesterday.

FATHER FLANAGAN

Father Flanagan is in Washington for a testimonial banquet and reception in his honor being given tonight at the Willard Hotel by the Calvert Club, an organization of Catholic business and professional men.

Asked to cite the greatest difference between the boy of today and the boy of 1917, when Father Flanagan borrowed $90 from a friend and started the home that was to become a haven for thousands of abandoned and mistreated youngsters, the priest said the modern lad is "much more alert and keen, in fact, sometimes too keen for his own good."

More Opportunity Today

"This is due, probably, to the radio and other inventions. It is certain that the boy of today has much more opportunity than he did in my day. He will make a much greater citizen in the future, which is a good thing, because the increasingly heavy responsibilities of a modern civilization will require extreme level-headiness on the part of its citizens."

Father Flanagan termed the work of psychologists in determining capabilities of a boy "very important" and commended Miss Anattasia Pisula, a Catholic University graduate, who assisted him at Boys Town last summer.

At Boys Town, where youngsters from 8 to 18 years of age own, operate and govern the community, is an accredited high school. The boys are also given vocational training, to prepare them both for higher education and useful trades.

100 to Fete Him Tonight

Since the film "Boys Town" swept the Nation, applications for entrance at Boys Town have increased to more than 1,100, whereas last year there were only about 700. Father Flanagan, whose full name is Edward J. Flanagan, said there are 200 boys there now, while almost 5,000 have been cared for there since its founding.

Members of the Calvert Club, 100 of them, at a banquet tonight at 6 o'clock will pay private tribute to Father Flanagan. A reception will be held at 8:30 p. m. Father Flanagan will speak briefly, and "The City of Little Men," a picturization of life at Boys Town, will be shown.

Honor guests include presidents of Georgetown, Catholic and Maryland universities. Admiral Ross A. McIntyre, Joseph B. Keenan, an old friend of Father Flanagan; numerous Government officials, clergy and laymen.

Lloyds Odds 32-1 Against War in '39

London, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—The Daily Express said yesterday Lloyds' underwriters are quoting 32 to 1 against Great Britain being involved in war before December 31, 1939, with little business transacted.

The Express added that the principal British life insurance companies again are accepting war risk insurance policies.

Pensacola Fliers Win Schiff Trophy

The Herbert Schiff Memorial Trophy, awarded annually to the naval aviation squadron or unit with the best record for safety in flying during the previous fiscal year, was won this year by Training Squadron Four (VN4-D8), stationed at Pensacola, Fla., the Navy Department announced yesterday.

The squadron, which is equipped with patrol airplanes, is commanded by Lieut. Comdr. Arnold J. Isbell, U. S. N. It won the contest in competition with 91 other squadrons or units.

President Roosevelt will present the trophy to Lieut. Comdr. Isbell in his executive office on December 21.

Walsh Opposes Arms Spending as Cure for Idleness

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—Speaking as chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said today he would oppose any armament building program "based upon revival" of arms industries or "as a means of solving the unemployment problem."

Declaring he "sensed" a growing movement in the country to use the national defense program as a means of launching a spending campaign, Walsh contended nonpolitical expert military opinion should guide the building program.

Judge Bentley Asks Civic Aid For Children

Attributes Juvenile Delinquency to Lack Of Community Interest

Holding lack of community interest largely responsible for juvenile delinquency, Judge Fay Bentley urged 50 American University co-educational students to take a greater part in civic affairs in the District.

Judge Bentley spoke at a meeting of girl students attempting to organize a Junior League of Women Voters at the university.

Delinquency among children usually results from conditions which could easily be corrected with little cost or trouble by interested groups, Judge Bentley said.

Urges Prevention

"Preventive equipment" in the form of social agencies and workers is easily able to make the necessary adjustments in the child's life to prevent his developing into a criminal, she said, adding: "Yet it is difficult to interest people sufficiently to provide such equipment."

Adjustments between home and school are frequently necessary in the case of the potential criminal, continued Judge Bentley. Such adjustments are made by social workers working successively with social welfare agencies to correct home conditions, with the courts and, in some cases, with clinics.

Teachers Can Aid

"The schools are in the best position to effect the adjustments," Judge Bentley said "as they touch the life of every individual and thus are in close contact. Furthermore, teachers are accepted and respected in the home."

An organization committee to nominate officers, draw up by-laws, and petition the faculty in the formation of the proposed Junior League of Women's Voters was named. The three members appointed are Eva Barger, Cora Anderson, and Beryl Reed.

Trustees, Counsel For Oil Estate to Split $150,000 Fees

Fees totaling $150,000 yesterday were allowed in District Court by Justice Jesse C. Adkins to trustees of the estate of James McDonald, Standard Oil official, who died in 1915, and their counsel.

Law firms which will share $50,000 from the award are McKenney, Flannery & Craighill, of Washington, and DeWitt, Lockman & DeWitt, of New York City. The Fulton Trust Co., of New York, and Joseph S. Graydon, of Cincinnati, trustees for the estate, will divide $100,000.

All the residue of the $6,000,000 estate was left to James McDonald, jr., and his two sons, to be divided when the eldest grandson reached the age of 30.

Harry Wardman's Daughter Wed to Maj. Milholland

MRS. ALICE WARDMAN RHEEM

Mrs. Alice Wardman Rheem, daughter of the late Harry Wardman, and Maj. George H. Milholland, of Fort Myer, Va., were married yesterday in Dauphin, Pa., at the home of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Albert Stackpole.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Harry Nelson Bassler, former chaplain of the 104th Cavalry, Pennsylvania National Guard, in the presence of a few friends. The bride was attended by her daughter, Miss Nancy Rheem, a student at Vassar College. James H. Milholland, of Overbrook, was best man for his brother.

The couple, when they return to Fort Myer today, will get the traditional ride on a tally-ho and a serenade by the post band.

After a brief stay at Fort Myer, the couple will motor to Florida and to Fort Clark, Tex., where they will visit Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Jonathan M. Wainwright and Lieut. and Mrs. John Ramsey Pugh 3d, of Fort Myer, who soon will begin duty at Fort Clark.

Mrs. Milholland, whose father was at one time the outstanding real estate operator and builder in Washington, obtained a divorce from Edmund D. Rheem, of the firm of Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey, in 1932.

Martha Ray's Kin Loses Love Suit

Hollywood, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—A superior court judge today awarded $7,500 to Nancy Dixon, a 21-year-old St. Louis stenographer, for the love she claimed was outraged by Peter Balma, stepfather of Martha Raye, the singing comedienne.

Miss Dixon had sued Balma for $75,000 on charges he had betrayed her in a Chicago hotel under promise of marriage. The asserted seduction took place before Balma married Miss Raye's mother, the former Maybelle Reed.

In cutting the award to 10 per cent of what Miss Dixon demanded, Judge Henry M. Willis gave her $5,000 actual damages and $2,500 exemplary damages.

their heads, some clothing and a not quite adequate amount of food.

A short time ago Mr. X received an offer of a job driving a truck. It is a job that pays more than enough to meet the demands of his small family; even the additional demands of the young daughter who needs prescribed nourishment. It is a job with a dependable firm that has investigated the qualifications of Mr. X, a firm that hires good men only and keeps them at their work as long as they are satisfactory.

But, in order to accept the offer, Mr. X must first put up the $150 bond required. If this amount could be made available, the immediate and —in all probability— the future problems of the X Family would be solved.

Lilienthal, TVA Chief, Ill of Undulant Fever

By the Associated Press.

David E. Lilienthal, director of the Tennessee Valley Authority, is suffering from undulant fever, his physician said yesterday.

He added that he expected Lilienthal would be "up and around" before long. The physician spoke after J. A. Krug, a TVA official, told Congressional investigators that the director was a "very sick man."

Burns Pleads Guilty in Smuggling Case receiving, concealing and transporting the jewelry.

Admits Misdemeanor

After Burns pleaded, his attorneys issued the following statement:

"Mr. Burns has entered a plea of guilty to the misdemeanor charged in the indictment.

"While he had no purpose or intent to offend against the laws of the United States he has been advised that the circumstances of this case indicate violation of the customs laws with respect to some novelty jewelry, which Mr. Burns purchased in New York City."

"For that reason," the statement continued, "upon being advised of his indictment he flew here from California to enter his plea and submit to the jurisdiction of the court."

Secrecy Surrounds Case

The secrecy which surrounded Burns' part in the case was so complete that not even his theatrical representatives were aware of his presence in this city.

Chaperau, who has described himself as a commercial agent for the Nicaraguan consulate-general here, has been pictured by the Government as the actual carrier of smuggled goods, escaping customs examination through diplomatic courtesy.

Investigators have obtained a long list of men and women prominent in the entertainment world who were among his supposed acquaintances. These included Jack Benny and Jack Pearl, comedians, and Wallace Ford, a motion picture director.

Mrs. Lauer, the justice's wife, was indicted on December 5 with Chaperau on charges of smuggling and conspiracy. She will be arraigned in Federal court Wednesday. Chaperau, who has pleaded not guilty, has claimed his troubles arose through the malice of a German maid who was discharged by the Lauers for breaking into an anti-Hitler dinner table conversation with a denunciation of her master, her mistress and their guests.

Eva Tanguay Says She'll Cheat Death

Hollywood, Dec. 12 (AP).—Her mind apparently clear for the first time in days, Eva Tanguay, 60, one-time vaudeville and musical comedy star, said from her bed today:

"I guess I'll fool them and live. I'm feeling swell."

Dr. Wendell W. Starr said Miss Tanguay, critically ill with an abdominal ailment, had needed "no additional blood transfusion," and there seemed to be some hope for her recovery.

France Builds 100,000-Ton Superliner

Normandie Designer Describes Ship Planned For 5,000 Passengers

The ocean liner of the future—a 100,000-ton super ship which will include accommodations for 5,000 passengers and 150 airplanes—has been designed by the man who planned the Normandie for France and now is under consideration by that government as the Normandie's successor, the designer said here yesterday.

He is Capt. Vladimir Yourkevitch, of New York City, whose design of the Normandie as the first of the modern ocean giants created a new trend in ship design and building with the "minimum resistance" bow, which acts in the water as streamlined automobiles act against wind resistance.

The new super-liner, which would be 1,120 feet in length, would be the largest ship afloat. Its principal aim would be to provide ocean travel for persons with middle-class incomes, Yourkevitch said, while its 750-foot landing deck would make it immediately available as an airplane carrier in time of emergency.

"This boat will be two Normandies, actually," Yourkevitch asserted. "Its 2,500 cabins will enable persons to make round-trip voyages to Europe for $100.

"Luxury features will be played down. On most of the big boats now there is a servant for almost each passenger. This ship will have cafeterias and other such democratic methods of service."

The ship, according to Yourkevitch's detailed design, will have 11 decks, with two funnels, one on each side of the landing deck atop the vessel. Yourkevitch explained the Normandie has only about 500 cabins and 120 feet shorter than the new liner will be. The new boat would cost $40,000,000 to build, while the Normandie cost $30,000,000, and would operate at a relatively small additional cost, he said.

Largest ship afloat today is the Queen Mary, with a displacement of 81,000 tons and a length of 1,019 feet. Her sister ship, the Queen Elizabeth, now being built in England, is to be slightly larger. She will be launched in 1940.

Capt. Yourkevitch is in Washington with his associate, A. N. Chernow, for a tank test of models of U. S. Merchant Marine ships before members of the Maritime Commission today at the Navy Yard. The tests will compare actions of the models of the Merchant Marine ships to those of the same type ships as designed by Yourkevitch.

Employes of more than two years' service will get one week's pay; those of one to two years' service, a half week's pay, and those who were employed prior to November 1 but have worked for the store less than a year, one-fourth week's pay. Workers hired since November 1 will be paid $2.50.

Chesterton's Widow, Noted Poet, Is Dead

London, Dec. 12 (AP).—Mrs. G. K. Chesterton, widow of the late British author, died today at a nursing home in suburban Beaconsfield.

Mrs. Chesterton, the former Frances Blogg, was a poet of note and once was described by her husband as "in all ways a kindred spirit." They were married in 1901.

Chesterton died June 14, 1936, at the age of 62.

'As I Saw It,' Mrs. Wilson's Memoirs, Out

Magazine Publication Begins Today; Writes Of Her Girlhood First

New York, Dec. 12.—The Saturday Evening Post will publish tomorrow the first installment of "As I Saw It," the memoirs of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the wartime President.

In the opening chapter Mrs. Wilson tells the story of her girlhood, her first marriage to Norman Galt, the Washington jeweler, her earliest glimpse of Wilson, when, as head of Princeton University, he was addressing an alumni dinner, a ride with him and his daughter, Miss Margaret Wilson, through the streets of Washington, and then she takes the reader into the White House for a fleeting moment after her marriage to the President.

Impoverished by War

"Until the summer before I was 13," Mrs. Wilson wrote, "I never had been outside the little Virginia mountain town of Wytheville, where I was born in 1872. After-the-war poverty obliged my father to abandon the family plantation, he had gone there to open a law office, taking with him an invalid mother, a young and inexperienced wife, two babies and no money.

He went in the knowledge that on Main street was an old house which his father, then dead, had taken in payment for debt.

"He had found this house, recently a Confederate hospital, untenanted and untenantable. But in time it was scrubbed and patched, and they moved in to make the home in which nine more of their children were born.

To Describe Courtship

"I had never been to school. My grandmother Bolling and father had taught me all I knew; father wrestling with arithmetic when he had time, she doing the rest.

And with a few more well turned sentences Mrs. Wilson tells of her departure from the mountain home with her father, and her brief boarding school experience and her first fascination.

A spokesman for the weekly said that in future installments Mrs. Wilson will describe the President's courtship, their wedding and their trips abroad in full detail."

Mansion, Once Hoover Home, Being Razed

1701 Massachusetts, In Hands of Wreckers, Rouses Old Memories

The dust rising from the red-brick mansion at 1701 Massachusetts avenue northwest is the natural result of the activity of house wreckers.

But to some Washingtonians, that dust carries with it memories of war-time days when Herbert Hoover was earning his reputation as Food Administrator, and to a very few old residents it will conjure up thoughts of the gas light era of 50 years ago.

The mansion has in recent years been a rooming house; but in 1917 it was the residence of Herbert Hoover when he was directing the Nation's war-time food supply.

One of the first residents of the house, which was built in 1881, was Bishop John Fletcher Hurst, founder and first chancellor of American University. Here were held the early discussions that led to the organization of the institution.

A few years later, Redfield Proctor, Secretary of War under President Benjamin Harrison, lived in the mansion. Proctor was appointed Senator from Vermont in 1891.

Several thousand square feet of oak paneling embellished the hall, staircase, library and dining room. Tremendous marble fireplaces, surrounded by hand-carved oak, decorated both library and dining room.

Frank Wolfsheimer, superintendent of the wrecking crew, estimated that the fireplaces cost about $3,000 apiece.

Lamont Fears British Decline As Blow to U.S.

Banker Asks 'What Kind of World' if England Is Vanquished

New York, Dec. 12.—Thomas W. Lamont, international banker, in one of his rare public speeches, tonight indicated a conviction that further loss of power in world affairs by the British Empire would be a serious blow to the United States.

He was called to the platform at the annual dinner of the Economic Club of New York and put his views before nearly 2,300 persons who also heard former Premier Van Zeeland, of Belgium propose a new international economic "good will" pact.

"From 1814 to 1914, a period known as the Pax Britannica," said Lamont, a senior partner in the J. P. Morgan banking house, "there were no world wars and great advantages accrued to America because of Britain's rule over the seven seas. What kind of a world will we face if Britain is brought to her knees?"

Criticizes U. S. Policy

Then, remarking that America, while "passionately devoted to peace" has so far since the World War acted only by "word of mouth," Lamont said "peace cannot be made unless a distinct effort is made."

"What will we face if the British Empire disintegrates?" he asked the gathering of many leaders of industry and finance.

"As a lifelong Republican," Lamont concluded, "I am strongly for the work the present Secretary of State (Cordell Hull) has done. They are distinct and helpful steps in building up the trade which is necessary to peace. We must make sacrifices, we must welcome lower tariffs so, in that way, the standards of living will rise and the threat of war be lessened."

Owen Young Speaks

Owen D. Young, introduced by Wendell L. Willkie, utilities operator, as "America's first industrialist," urged that business interests maintain international relations as best they could in the face of "jealousies" between governments.

Young said "I pin my faith" on "the ultimate force of public opinion" and the "inherent weakness of the wrong" rather than "on treaties of governments.

"When Chamberlain is applauded in the streets of Munich, by people with none too much information, who realized they had been saved from war, and when Mussolini received a great ovation in the streets of Rome as the savior of peace and when one sensed in the United States the gratification," Young said, "one must have hope, one must have courage to do what there is to do in order that the end of this menacing threat to life and liberty may not be too far away."

Errol Flynn Kayoes Poloist At Mrs. Jock Whitney's Party

Resented Remark About His Hearing By Darryl Zanuck's Aide; Hit Hardest But Not First, So Goes to Dentist

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Dec. 12.—Errol Flynn, who has hunted big game in Siam, eluded Guinea head hunters and made screen love to Hollywood cuties, went down in the books tonight as a two-fisted man of brawn.

The handsome screen lover was credited with a knockout over polo-playing Aiden Roark in a brief fight yesterday in Mrs. Jock Whitney's barn. Fifty witnesses, gathered for what had been billed as a haymow cocktail party, said four blows were struck, with Roark on the receiving end of three.

As usual with all Hollywood bouts, there were several versions of the affair, but the one most generally reported was that Roark made a disparaging remark about Flynn's hearing. Roark is the polo partner and studio assistant of Darryl Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox bigwig.

Witnesses said Flynn resented the remark and in a second the two were peeling off their coats. Roark struck first, a straight left which landed flush on the handsome Flynn mouth. The actor retaliated with two rights and a left, the last knocking the polo player horizontal.

While ladies in the party squealed, Bruce Cabot and Bud Ernst pulled the two combatants apart before further damage could be done.

Neither Flynn nor Roark had anything to say about the bout today. Flynn, with a puffed lip and aching front tooth, took himself off to the dentist and couldn't be reached at his studio. Roark said he wouldn't be quoted.

Goal Is Sighted For Subsidized Export of Wheat

By the Associated Press.

F. R. Wilcox, in charge of the Agriculture Department's efforts to subsidize the export of 100,000,000 bushels of wheat this fiscal year, predicted yesterday the goal would be reached.

Just back from Europe after negotiating sales to British millers, Wilcox told reporters a 20,000,000-bushel transaction previously announced with them had been increased by 5,000,000 bushels in last-minute negotiations.

Wilcox said the British sales, on which the export subsidy is expected to average a little better than 20 cents a bushel, brought to about 70,000,000 bushels the total marketed since inauguration of the policy of reimbursing exporters for losses suffered in selling wheat abroad below the domestic price.

Human Skeleton Found Sunk in Arlington Marsh

A human skeleton believed to be that of a man, last night was discovered partially submerged in marshes behind the Arlington County property yard on South Glebe road extended.

Detective Hugh Jones of the Arlington County Police, reported a hunter discovered the remains while crossing the marsh and notified the police.

Only clue to the identity of the dead man was a key ring and four keys. Police believed they were house or office keys, and planned to check the numbers.

The skeleton was taken to the funeral home of C. J. Ives, where a thorough examination in an effort to learn the approximate age and find possible marks of identification was planned.

Nazis Submit Plan to 'Sell' All Refugees

Reich Offers to Aid Emigration If Foreign Nations 'Buy German'

By the United Press.

Berlin, Dec. 12.—Details of a plan to rid Germany of her 700,000 unwanted Jews within two years and at the same time increase German exports by millions of dollars were revealed tonight in an announcement the Reich will "facilitate" Jewish emigration.

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank and Germany's "economic wizard," will inform the Bank of International Settlements in Basle and the Inter-Governmental Committee on Refugees in London this week Germany is ready to release a portion of Jewish wealth.

Must Buy Nazi Goods

The plan contemplates granting permission to emigrating German Jews to carry more than 15 per cent of their remaining wealth out of the Reich when they go to new homes abroad.

This permission would apply, however, only when foreign governments giving homes to the Jews agree to use these funds for the purchase of additional German exports.

Actually, the migrating Jews would not take any money out of Germany but would receive government certificates. These certificates they would sell to foreign government agencies to be used for purchasing German goods.

Ghetto Plan Denied

Schacht already has outlined the plan in a letter to the Bank of International Settlements and will discuss it in detail when he attends the bank's meeting in Basle Wednesday and Thursday before proceeding to London.

In London, he will discuss the scheme with George Rublee, American director of the Inter-Governmental Committee on Refugees who has been attempting for more than a month to overcome the financial stumbling block in the way of mass migration of Germany's Jews. Schacht also will confer with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

The announcement of Germany's readiness to "facilitate Jewish emigration" by co-operating in a financial solution raised hope that a number of countries, particularly those in South America, would be willing to receive German Jews if they are permitted to take wealth out of Germany.

The announcement, made by the German News Agency D. N. B., which denied Germany intends to drive the Jews into ghetto, said that after New Year's Day Jews will be permitted to buy at German shops and frequent "Aryan" hotels and restaurants although they will continue to be barred from some public places.

The anti-Semitic measures taken the last month, D. N. B. explained, were "aimed at the eventual emigration of Jews from Germany and were undertaken solely to prevent friction and make living with Aryans unbearable until Jewish emigration is completed."

Supreme Court Rejects Plea Of NLRB for Sit-Down Crews

Court

At the time of the dispute, the International Seamen's Union (American Federation of Labor) had contracts with the company, which operates the steamers Florida and Cuba between Miami and Port Tampa, Fla., and Havana.

Crew members on the Florida struck at Tampa on June 4, 1937, asserting they wished to change their union affiliation from the American Federation of Labor to the C. I. O. Members of the Cuba crew joined the strike. It was settled by intervention of the Labor Department.

Two weeks later members of the crew on the Cuba who still favored A. F. L. affiliation refused to sail with those who had joined the C. I. O., and a new strike resulted. Crews of both the Florida and the Cuba were discharged, and the A. F. L. union, under its contract, supplied new crews.

The circuit court decided that the seizing of the ships by sit-down strikers was "at least prima facie evidence that the crews were guilty of mutiny."

It added:

A. F. L. Opposed Order

The A. F. L. contended the circuit court's decision should be allowed to stand. It argued the labor board order "declined to give effect to an existing contract."

In the Missouri University case Chief Justice Hughes wrote the majority opinion while Justices McReynolds and Butler dissented.

"We are of the opinion," Hughes said, ". . . that petitioner was entitled to be admitted to the law school of the State university in the absence of other and proper provision for his legal training within the State."

Brushing aside, as beside the point, Missouri's scholarship arrangement and provision for establishment of a law school at Lincoln University when the curators deemed it necessary, the chief justice said the State "was bound to furnish him (Gaines) within its borders facilities for legal education substantially equal to those which the State there afforded for persons of the white race, whether or not Negroes sought the same opportunity."

Charles Houston, attorney for Gaines, said last night the decision probably would increase higher education facilities for colored people in 16 States which now bar them from State professional schools.

Seven States now provide the type of grants objected to, he said: Missouri, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Oklahoma and Maryland. Maryland also provides that colored students may attend its State university if the subjects they want are not taught in their own schools.

Houston said these States excluded colored students from their universities and made no other provisions for graduate training: Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Texas.

(In Lansing, Mich., where he is employed on a WPA-sponsored survey, Gaines declined to say whether he would enter the school, which previously had refused to admit him.)

McReynolds Dissents

McReynolds in his dissent said the Missouri Supreme Court "arrived at a tenable conclusion and its judgment should be affirmed."

"That court well understood the grave difficulties of the situation," he said, "and rightly refused to upset the settled legislative policy of the State."

Charles Houston, counsel for Gaines, said the decision "affects the entire scope of graduate professional training" for colored students in 16 Southern States which do not now provide such training within their borders.

In another case involving a colored man, the Supreme Court agreed to review a decision by the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals, which refused I. W. Lane, of Wagoner County, Okla., a $10,000 judgment against election officials whom he accused of denying him the right to register or vote in the county.

Path Through French Africa Asked for Italy

Italian Spokesman Calls for Somaliland Port and Rail Rights

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Dec. 12.—Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, sounded Italy's demand today for an open door to her Ethiopian empire through French Somaliland.

He indicated the least Italy would ask of France would be better and cheaper shipping facilities at the port of Djibouti, a larger share in the Djibouti-Addis Ababa railroad and reduction in rates, and an end to alleged anti-Italian activity in the French colony.

Gayda, writing in his Il Giornale d'Italia, charged Djibouti not only was a base for French opposition to Italy's colonial expansion but a parasite feeding on "the blood of Italian shipping and labor."

"Silent War" Charged

Meanwhile, the City of Pesaro, on the Adriatic coast, changed the names of three streets to Nizza (Nice), Corsica and Tunisia, all French territories which figured in the Italian clamor.

Gayda, who is close to Foreign Minister Ciano, charged Djibouti "always has been an active center of France's war, silent but continuous, against Italian interests."

He alleged the city was a center of anti-Fascist activity from which Tecle Hawariate, former Ethiopian diplomat, still was sending encouragement to rebel bands holding out against the Italian in Ethiopia.

Ethiopian officials still occupy their former consulate in Djibouti and the city is a center for smugglers of Italian lire and Ethiopia's big silver thalers, he said.

Seek Railroad Share

Gayda asserted the port facilities and the railroad under French operation were inefficient and costly for Italians, although the only shipping was between Italy and Ethiopia.

He added that although only about 55 of the railroad's 470 miles lay in French territory, Italy had been able to buy only a small packet of shares in it at a high price.

The French, he said, were withholding from Italy shares which formerly belonged to the Ethiopian government and had discontinued payments for railroad concessions formerly made to Ethiopia.

(Italy holds 10 per cent of the railroad shares; Haile Selassie, former emperor of Ethiopia, has 25 per cent, and France holds the rest.)

U. S. Reporter Must Quit

Rome, Dec. 12 (AP).—The Italian government today notified Arnaldo Cortesi, veteran correspondent of the New York Times, he must cease serving that newspaper by January 1.

The Ministry of Popular Culture ruled that Cortesi, as an Italian citizen, came within the provisions of an order issued December 3 forbidding Italian newspapermen to correspond for foreign newspapers or agencies.

Times Is Silent

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—Edwin L. James, managing editor of the New York Times, declined to comment today on the action of the Italian government in forbidding Arnaldo Cortesi to continue to serve that newspaper as its Rome correspondent.

Harwich, Eng., Dec. 12 (AP).—A group of 507 Jewish children refugees from Nazi anti-Semitism in Vienna, landed here today to join previous groups from Germany who have been given asylum in English camps.

The group, the first children to arrive from Vienna, was made up of sons and daughters of fathers who were dead or were in concentration camps. Their ages ranged from 3 to 17 year. Others are to follow every two weeks.

U. S. Weighs Loans to Spur Latin Trade

Trade

America and $2,651,745,000 from the world.

Morgenthau said one of the chief obstacles to increasing sales in Latin America was the difficulty Latin American businessmen experienced in getting dollars to pay for our goods. Except for increased United States purchases from Latin America, the chief means of increasing the amount of dollar exchange available to those countries is lending it to them.

In the case of Mexico, however, the United States has increased the supply of dollars by buying large quantities of Mexican silver. Peru and some of the other Latin American countries also sell small amounts of gold and silver here for dollars.

Sayre Hits Crop Control

New Orleans, Dec. 12 (AP).—Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, today hailed the Anglo-American trade agreement as "the effective reply to the defeatism which appeared in some quarters after the Munich settlement."

In a speech prepared for delivery before the Cotton Conference of the American Farm Bureau Federation he also declared that "crop restriction means economic retrogression and lessening of national income," and urged free trade to move American cotton into foreign markets.

The United States-Argentine agreement is so complete, it was reported, that Cantilo personally assured Hull that if unforeseen obstacles arise at the conference, he will return to Lima to help smooth them out. The assurance was regarded as an indication that the Argentine delegation was instructed to co-operate closely with the United States on the basis agreed upon by Cantilo and Hull.

The unity in viewpoint between the two delegations was particularly gratifying to other countries represented here and which have seen previous Pan American Conferences handicapped by clashes in United States and Argentine policies.

Argentina Hails Democracy

Buenos Aires, Dec. 12 (AP).—An estimated 15,000 persons staged a mass meeting tonight in support of democratic measures by the Pan-American Conference at Lima, Peru, against possible totalitarian influence in Latin America.

Speakers at the meeting in Laguna Park urged a united front by the Americas. Among those addressing the crowd were Marcelo Alvear, former president of Argentina; former Foreign Minister Honorio Pueyrredon, and a number of national deputies.

HOLIDAY BARGAIN HUNTERS LEARN WHISKEY ECONOMY AS SURVEY AMONG 1,000 MEN REVEALS STARTLING RESULTS!

Out of 1,000 Men Who Sampled OLD QUAKER—Now 3 Years Old—960 Found It Superbly Mellow, Rich in Flavor—Confirming Our Belief that OLD QUAKER Rivals many Higher Priced Whiskies!

"Man—tell me where I can get it!" says John A. Irwine, New Jersey Business Man, after he finished his drink of Old Quaker.

● It's a fact! This year you won't have to spend extra dollars to get whiskey that's "good enough for the holidays". Just the opposite! For, Old Quaker—now 3 years old—rivals many fine whiskies that are more expensive! Here's why we say so:—

We sought out 1,000 men and asked them for their frank opinion of Old Quaker. "Smell it!", we said. "Taste it! Take a drink of it! Then tell us what you think."

None of these men knew the name, age or price of the whiskey he was trying—yet 960 of them found Old Quaker rich in flavor, mild and delightfully smooth . . . confirming our belief that Old Quaker is an amazing bargain at its rock-bottom price.

How This Concerns You

If your taste agrees with these 960 out of 1,000 men—here's the direct way for you to save money on whiskey. Make the same simple trial of 3-year Old Quaker yourself! See for yourself that this is the cheeriest news of the season! Give choice whiskey for the holidays—stock up on it for your own holiday hospitality—yet do it with utmost economy!

Reich Asked To Respect Memel Pact

Representations Made As Formality With No Hint of Use of Force

By Frank R. Kelley,
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Dec. 12.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain told the House of Commons today that Britain and France had asked Germany to use its influence to "secure respect" for the statute of Memel.

Under this statute or convention signed by Britain, France, Italy and Japan with Lithuania in 1924, Memel, detached from Germany under the Treaty of Versailles, was placed under Lithuanian sovereignty, but with a large measure of local autonomy.

Yesterday's parliamentary elections in Memel foreshadow an early attempt by Germany to regain the territory, any change-over would be "inconsistent" with the 1924 convention, Chamberlain said today.

Expects Decent Transfer

At the same time official quarters in Whitehall made it clear Britain does not regard herself in any sense as a "guarantor" of Memel's status, and is only interested as a signatory of the statute. The representations to Germany were made for the sake of dignity and formality. Britain hopes the transfer of Memel will be accomplished "decently."

John Morgan, a Laborite, began by asking Chamberlain whether any treaty, pact or agreed understanding existed which, in the event of Italy embarking on war-like operations against France or her possessions, would specifically require Great Britain to render military aid to France.

"No such specific requirement exists in any treaty or pact with France," replied Chamberlain.

Britain Not Pledged

A Whitehall official commenting on Chamberlain's statement admitted Britain is pledged to defend France under the modified Locarno pact which the two countries assumed after Hitler remilitarized the Rhineland in 1935.

This obligation commits Britain only to the preservation of France's eastern frontier, along the Rhine, and has no reference to France's present estrangement from Italy, it was said.

Another Laborite, Lieut. Comdr. Reginald Fletcher, asked Chamberlain for an assurance that in the Rome conversations he would not enter into agreement with Italy concerning the Suez Canal, the Spanish Civil War or any matters not dealt with by the Anglo-Italian agreement, without the proviso that they must receive assent of the House of Commons.

Visit to Be Personal

"My visit is primarily intended for making personal contact with Signor Mussolini," said Chamberlain. "If any agreement should be entered into during the course of my interview, it would be submitted to the House for discussion."

Finally came Chamberlain's statement on Memel. In reply to a question by Philip Noel-Baker, a Laborite, Chamberlain said:

"The elections for the Memel Diet took place yesterday and there is reason to think that after this election demands may be made on the Lithuanian government by the majority party in the Diet which would be inconsistent with the statute of Memel.

Appeasement Statement Due

"The government as signatory to the Memel convention cannot ignore this possibility. In view of the special influence that the German government is in a position in these matters to exert, his majesty's charge d'affaires in Berlin has been instructed to join with the French Ambassador in expressing the hope that the German government will use her influence to secure respect for the statute of Memel."

Chamberlain is expected to cast additional light upon his foreign policy of "appeasement" when he speaks tomorrow night as the guest of the Foreign Press Association, at the golden jubilee banquet at the Grosvenor House Hotel.

Hitler is sending a special envoy to the banquet to give him a confidential report on it. The envoy is Godfried Aschman, head of the press department of the German foreign office.

Vatican Prisoner Tried for Theft

Vatican City, Dec. 12 (AP).—The only occupant of the Vatican's model jail, Mario Politi, went on trial before the Vatican Court today on charges of embezzling 608,000 lire ($31,981) while bookkeeper for the Vatican Library. The trial is expected to last several days.

Politi is the eleventh person to be tried under the pontifical penal code since establishment of Vatican City as an independent state in 1929. One of the previous ten was acquitted; nine received prison terms ranging from five days to three years.

Japan's Stand Weighed By State Department

By the Associated Press.

Japan's explanation of what it calls a "new order" in the Orient was in the hands of State Department officials yesterday, but they were silent on their reaction.

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, said there would be no comment until after a complete appraisal of the Japanese attitude. Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita was reported to have told American Ambassador Joseph C. Grew at Tokyo that it may be necessary to revise the principle of an "open door" to China's trade. Grew forwarded this information.

Reich Warns Liths to Avoid 'Past Errors'

Treatment of Memel Will Decide Nation's Future, Berlin Asserts

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Dec. 12 (AP).—The German foreign office mouthpiece warned gently today it is time for the Lithuanian government to mend its attitude toward Memel in the light of "the united confession of Memellanders to their German nationality" in yesterday's Memel Diet elections.

The organ, Deutsche Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz, said the overwhelming participation in the election should show Lithuania the road to take. It continued:

"How the Lithuanian government will act toward the new expression of the will of Memelland is essential for determination of future developments.

Blames Lithuania

"It must be clear at once that mistakes committed in the past by the Lithuanians could not continue without consequences."

The organ said the Lithuanian government by denying Memelland "certain guarantees" and "through its system" had hastened developments in the present direction.

(Sunday's Memel Diet elections were participated in heavily by Nazis, and, although the actual outcome will not be known for several days, it is assumed they added to their present strength of 24 of the 29 parliamentary seats.)

The paper hastened to state, however, that there is no "traditional enmity" of Germans toward Lithuanians. It concluded:

"To that extent yesterday's manifestation of Memellanders can now sow the seed for a fruitful and improved development of relations between the two people (Lithuanians and Memellanders) and prepare an end for all contested points."

Korrespondenz ridiculed foreign interpretations of the Memel question as "an alarming sign of German expansion in the east"—an interpretation which it said "has absolutely nothing to do with developments there."

"80,000,000 Look Eastward"

"The question here," said Korrespondenz, "is how the will of an old established people can best be respected."

The traditionally conservative Berlin newspaper Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, however, said in a long article on European developments that "Germany once more is the great power of central Europe which with the weight of its population of 80,000,000 is radiating eastward."

Kovno, Lithuania, Dec. 12 (AP).—Lithuania's unruly stepchild, Memel, edged closer to the skirts of mother Germany today while Antanas Smetona began his fourth term as President of Lithuania with the troubled words, "We small countries must be careful."

Agitation in tiny but truculent Memel to go "back to the Reich" and trouble from his Rightist foes in Lithuania proper beset the All-Nationalist government of Smetona, who has been Lithuania's chief of state with only a brief interruption since the nation became independent after the war.

U. S. Subpenas Japanese Ship Data in Inquiry

Nipponese Accused Of Unfair Pretices In Coast Rate War

By the Associated Press.

The Maritime Commission announced yesterday it had subpenaed books, records and correspondence of two large Japanese shipping companies in an investigation of a reported shipping rate war.

The subpenas were served, the commission said, on the Osaka Syosen Kabusiki Kaisya in New York City and upon Williams, Diamond & Co., agents for the line in San Francisco, and in Seattle upon the Yamashita Kisen Kabushiki Kaisha and its agents, Swayne & Hot, in San Francisco. The rate war was alleged to have been started by these operators, the commission said.

They were summoned to appear at a hearing here December 21.

The commission said its investigation was directed primarily into Japanese shipping activities in ocean trade between South America and Pacific Coast ports of the United States.

Numerous protests, a commission spokesman said, have been received from shippers and shipping companies allegin that the Japanese are employing unfair trade practices. The commission said it had been estimated that the alleged practices might result in a loss of at least $25,000 a month to one American flag operator.

The commission said the protest followed "sudden, drastic and allegedly unwarranted reduction in rates, particularly for transporting coffee from South America to United States ports."

Etting Jury Told of Threat To Kill 'All 3'

Singer Says Ex-Mate Cried 'This Is the End' At Her and Daughter

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Dec. 12.—Ruth Etting today testified against her former husband, Martin Snyder, who is on trial for the alleged kidnaping and attempted murder of Myrl Alderman, the singer's accompanist.

Dressed in gray and wearing dark glasses, Miss Etting gave a detailed account of the shooting in Alderman's home last October 15.

Snyder, her husband for 17 years, "told us this was the end of all three of us," she testified. She said Snyder meant her, Alderman and Snyder's daughter, Edith.

Miss Etting and Edith had gone to the home of Alderman, whom she said she planned to marry as soon as his divorce became final, and were cooking pork chops and vegetables for dinner when Alderman came to the kitchen door, followed by Snyder, who was poking him in the back with a pistol, partly covered by a handkerchief, Miss Etting said.

Says He Cursed at Them

"Snyder cursed and told us he had us where he wanted us," she testified. "Waving the pistol, he forced us all into the music room and told us this was the end of all three of us."

Alderman dropped down on the piano bench, she related. Edith cried, "If you're going to shoot, shoot!"

"I told you to sit down," she quoted Snyder as snapping.

Miss Etting said she pleaded with Snyder and that Alderman started to talk, but just then Snyder fired twice. She screamed as she saw Alderman fall to the floor on his face, she testified. The lights went out.

"I've had my revenge," she quoted Snyder, "and now you can call the police."

Ran for Her Own Gun

The singer said she ran to the bedroom to get a .32-caliber pistol which she had kept since she heard Snyder had come to California.

Snyder wrested the pistol from her, she said, and she ran to the music room to call police. Miss Etting said she saw Edith Snyder holding her father's coat lapels and pleading with him as she went into the kitchen she heard another shot, she testified, and Snyder ran past her into the street and Edith appeared gripping Miss Etting's pistol.

She testified that when she divorced Snyder, she gave him half of her accumulated earnings—$50,000 in cash, some securities and a half interest in a Beverly Hills home. In making the settlement, she declared, she deducted $50,000 for gambling debts, which she said she had paid, and the cost of a home Snyder had provided for his mother.

In his opening statement to the jury, Jerry Giesler, defense lawyer, said he would prove Snyder had not planned to harm the women and when he took the pistol from Miss Etting he threw it on the floor. He said also he would prove Alderman was not kidnaped but went willingly from the radio studio, where he worked as a composer, to his home.

Waterworks Men Strike in St. Louis

St. Louis, Dec. 12 (AP).—The International Union of Operating Engineers, Local No. 2, late today suddenly called a strike at plants of the St. Louis city waterworks.

Edward E. Wall, director of public utilities, said the city had no more than a 36 hours' supply of water in reservoirs.

Wall said a jurisdictional dispute of the union with the Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers was responsible. Wall said other engineers would be hired to replace the 43 strikers but this "may take some time."

Anthony Eden's Resignation

If you read the Gallup Poll in The Post last March, you know what British public opinion had to say about Anthony Eden's resignation from the British cabinet.

You cannot keep informed on shifting trends of American opinion if you do not read the Gallup Polls. You cannot read the Gallup Polls in Washington unless you are a daily and Sunday subscriber to The Washington Post.

Means Dies Refusing to Tell Wife Where He Hid $104,000 Loot From Mrs. McLean

Means

dug up the yard. Mrs. Means was searched one time on a "tip" that she had the money in a belt she was wearing.

Mrs. Means, who stuck by her husband throughout his amazing career, claimed the body, which will be sent to Concord, N. C., his family home, for burial tomorrow.

To Alcatraz in 1934

Means was convicted here on June 13, 1932, on a charge of obtaining $104,000 from Mrs. McLean on the pretext of being able to have Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's son returned to him alive.

He was first sent to the Atlanta Penitentiary, then to the Northwestern Penitentiary, at Lewisburg, Pa., and from there was transferred to Leavenworth, Kans. In September, 1934, he was sent to Alcatraz, the Justice Department terming him a "bad actor."

Illness resulted in his transfer to the prison hospital at Springfield. Death had been expected since last Thursday when he suffered a heart attack following the gall bladder operation.

Agents Not Present at Death

Justice Department officials explained that no department agents were with Means at time of his death. In consequence, agents did not quiz him in his last moments as to what he did with the McLean money. Mrs. Means, it is indicated, was the one person to make a final effort to get him to reveal the secret.

Besides his wife, Means is survived by a son, Billy; three brothers, Afton and Brandon W. Means, of Concord, and Frank Means, of Providence, R. I., and three sisters, Mrs. J. F. Goodman and the Misses Mary Belle and Kate Means, of Concord.

The Lindbergh baby swindle climaxed a career so sensational and melodramatic that J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, once referred to Means as the most amazing man he had ever contacted.

Repudiated Harding Story

He figured in sensational "disclosures" concerning the Harding Administration, which later were repudiated, war-time espionage as the agent of German employers, a charge of murdering a client, and a sensational prohibition case.

Means was 59 years old. He had served five years of a 15-year sentence for conspiracy, grand larceny and embezzlement in the Lindbergh baby case. Big—he weighed 230 pounds in his prime—Means was at ease in the highest political and social circles. Associates recall him as an exceptionally brilliant man who knew all the tricks of the law and was marvelously expert in dodging traps through resort to legal technicalities.

Underwood & Underwood.

Gaston B. Means (right), former Secret Service operative, is shown with Chief Deputy Marshal John J. Clarkson after Means' arraignment here in 1933 for obtaining more than $100,000 from Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean on the pretext of ransoming the Lindbergh baby

He was born at Concord in 1879. As early as 1914, he was involved in an insurance swindle. In 1917 he handled the million-dollar estate of Mrs. Maude King, whom he later was charged with murdering. He was acquitted. In connection with his work as a German spy, he was questioned by the War Department regarding the famous Black Tom explosion in 1916.

Wrote of Harding's Death

He was a Burns Detective Agency operative for many years. In 1921 he became a Justice Department agent under William J. Burns, chief of the Bureau of Investigation. Hoover was a clerk at that time.

He later was questioned by a Senate committee regarding his activities in Washington during this period. He made sensational charges which officials heatedly denied. He published a book in 1930 on "The Strange Death of President Harding."

Means obtained the $104,000 from Mrs. McLean before the Lindbergh baby's body was found. After he was convicted and sentenced to prison, he was brought from prison for trial with Norman T. Whitaker on a charge of attempting to obtain an additional $35,000 from Mrs. McLean. He sought the money, testimony showed, on a promise that with it he could obtain $49,000 of the ransom money paid by Col. Lindbergh.

Means and Whitaker were convicted and given two-year sentences after Col. Lindbergh had appeared and given his own story of the kidnaping.

Prosecutor Of Capone Urged As Chicago Mayor

Chicago, Dec. 12 (AP).—Dwight H. Green, former district attorney who won wide fame during his prosecution of Al Capone, was urged by Republican organization leaders today to become a candidate for mayor. He promised to announce his decision within the next few days.

William Hale Thompson, thrice elected mayor on the Republican ticket, may make known tomorrow whether he will enter the race again.

At the same time, a meeting of the Democratic city committee may bring forth resolutions requesting Mayor Edward J. Kelly to seek renomination, and Secretary of the Interior Ickes also was expected to make a definite decision on whether he will enter the contest.

"Quite interesting," or "impressive," he remarked time and again.

When the inspection party barged into the typical three-room Williamsburg apartment occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Rudman and their 3-year-old daughter, Eden apologized for "tramping in here with muddy boots and disturbing these people."

Later Eden spent an hour at the Metropolitan Museum of Art before visiting in his hotel suite with a group from the Foreign Policy Association.

Eden Reaches Objective

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

New York, Dec. 12.—Sources close to Anthony Eden tonight revealed that already he had reached his major objective on his American visit—to find out the reason for America's coolness toward Britain after the Munich accord.

These informants disclosed that he already has a brief case full of American views on the subject.

His visit in Washington, where he will discuss international politics with ranking members of the State Department, is expected to take a highly significant turn—although it is doubtful whether there will be any views expressed publicly.

These are generally believed to be Eden's objectives:

To brief himself on the American attitude toward the Munich accord, and to report informally to his government the reason for the clouds that have obscured Anglo-American friendship since that event.

To make clear to Americans that he has buried the hatchet with Prime Minister Chamberlain, and that the times are so critical that he is British first and an opposition conservative second.

To seek to erase any notion of differences within the British conservative party or the British government, both of which Eden may hope to lead.

Finally, to lay the groundwork for acceptance of an office in the British cabinet when he returns to London.

Tunis Police Seize Fascist for Firing Social Center

Tunis, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—The French police tonight arrested Antonio Larosa, described as a member of the Fascist Party, on charges of having set fire to the Italian Social Center at Tunis, in a flare-up of Italo-French hostility.

Police said Larosa's papers showed him to be a member of the Fascist Party but no indication was given as to his possible motive or whether he might be suspected as an "agent provocateur" attempting to create some sort of incident between Italy and France.

Police also said Larosa had hidden a bomb somewhere in the Italian Social Center.

Government Wins Yugoslav Election

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—Official results of Sunday's Nation-wide elections showed tonight the government party under Premier Milan Stoyadinovich would control parliament with 310 seats, to approximately 60 for the united opposition.

Failure of the third party group, the Fascists, to poll more than 30,000 votes out of more than 3,000,000 cast, was a feature of the balloting.

Diplomat's Brother, Social Leader, Dies

McCormick-Goodhart, 51, Succumbs Here, After Year's Illness

Frederick Hamilton McCormick-Goodhart, 51, socially prominent brother of the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy, died yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel after a year's illness.

Besides his Washington residence at 2221 R street northwest, Mr. McCormick-Goodhart maintained homes at Bar Harbor, Me., and Hobe Sound, Fla. He was a commodore of the Bar Harbor Yacht Club. His other clubs were the Metropolitan here, the University in New York City, and Pot and Kettle and Kebo Gulf Club, both of Bar Harbor.

Born in Chicago

He was born in Chicago, the son of the late Frederick E. and Henrietta Laura McCormick-Goodhart. Educated at Eton and Oxford, he practiced law in England until 1914. He served throughout the war at the Admiralty in London with a lieutenant's commission in the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve.

He returned to this country in 1923, two years after his brother, Leander McCormick-Goodhart, was assigned to the embassy here. He was a director of the National Metropolitan Bank of Washington for several years.

Leaves 3 Children

Surviving, besides his brother, are his wife, the former Anstiss Devaux, of New York City; their daughter, Anstiss Hunt McCormick-Goodhart; and two children of his marriage to the former Gladys Sylvani Smith, Mrs. James McMillan Gibson, of Washington, and Leander Hamilton McCormick-Goodhart, now an undergraduate at Oxford.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Church of the Epiphany. Pallbearers will be Thomas Bell Sweeney, Richard H. Wilmer, Marshall Langhorne, William J. Flather, jr., Capt. Theodore Wilkinson, Capt. Herbert Howard, Howard Ellison and Sleden Chapin.

Interment will take place at Bar Harbor.

Edwin B. Pitts, 51, Fraternal Leader And Veteran, Dies

Edwin Basil Pitts, 51, chief clerk in the office of the Judge Advocate General of the War Department, and a leader in fraternal affairs in Washington and Maryland, died yesterday at his home, 16 Ross street, Cottage City, Md.

A native of Oswego County, N. Y., Pitts served with the Army during the World War, and moved to Cottage City shortly after. At his death he was grand warden of the Odd Fellows in Maryland. He was also past State counselor of the Junior Order of American Mechanics in the District, and a member of the Masons.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Harriet Edna Pitts, member of the Prince Georges County Board of Education; a son, Donald Edwin Pitts, and two grand-daughters, of Cottage City.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p. m. tomorrow in Gasch's funeral home, Hyattsville, Md. Odd Fellows' services will be held at Gasch's, while Masonic services will be held at the grave in Arlington Cemetery.

Dr. Phebe Norris' Funeral Set Today

Funeral services for Dr. Phebe Russell Norris, 78, prominent Washington physician for more than 50 years, who died Sunday, will be held at 2 p. m. today in Hysong's funeral home, 1300 N street northwest.

Dr. Norris received her medical training at old Columbian University, now George Washington. She practiced here until retirement 12 years ago.

A native of Monrovia, Md., Dr. Norris was a member of the first graduating class at Juniata College, Huntingdon, Pa. She was a member of the Pi Beta Phi Sorority, the District Medical Society, and the Luther Place Memorial Church. She lived in the Iowa Apartments, Thirteenth and O streets northwest.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Florence Norris Moomaw and Miss Laura Norris, both of Chevy Chase, Md.

'Missing Witness Mystery' Unfolds in Court

Plot

Army. They became buddies, said Goldstein, and Speicher advanced the general $4,500.

Little Blue Envelopes

There was a lot of talk about War Department contracts, said Goldstein, and the House Military Affairs Committee set out to investigate them. Then, said he, the Silvermans—who have sold millions in surplus war materials to a dozen armies—told Speicher, "If you tell about that loan you'll get us all in a jam."

So Steicher went to New York. Every once in a while, said Goldstein, Speicher, would sent to Ryan's office one "Dr. O'Brien," who would get big money in little blue envelopes. "Dr. O'Brien," said Goldstein, really was Harold E. Schnure, who, he promised, would tell the jury all about the little blue envelopes.

When Goldstein sat down, Attorney Lynch told the court he couldn't see anything in that to incriminate Gen. Williams and he thought the right thing would be a directed verdict of acquittal for the general.

Justice Proctor said no.

Silverman Defense Speaks

Attorney Leahy then told the jury the facts were much more fantastic than Goldstein had made out. He told how Joseph Silverman had been in business here for many years, while his brother was in business in New York and how they bought millions of shirts and jackets and pants from the War Department and there never was any graft about their business.

Leahy described the defendants as innocent victims of a struggle between two giant automobile firms for millions of dollars worth of Government orders.

The way it was, said Leahy, was this—that Speicher told Joseph Silverman he had heard the investigators were trying to hang something on Harry Woodring, now Secretary of War and then Assistant Secretary.

"And Speicher said there was nothing on Woodring," Leahy told the jurors, "and that he had the evidence and would give it to Mr. Silverman. But Speicher said he had been to great expense and he thought Mr. Silverman ought to share it. He wanted $50."

Informant "Tested"

Silverman, said Leahy, was by no means taken in by this, because he went to former Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer and told him about it. Palmer doubted that Speicher had any valuable information, said Leahy, but told Silverman to try him with a test story. Silverman did and gave Speicher the $50 and the story turned out to be true.

After that Speicher would call Silverman up quite often and give him information and Silverman would take it to the House Military Affairs Committee. And that, said Leahy, was what the telephone calls between them were about and that was what the money in the blue envelopes was for.

First on the stand was George F. Stockett, clerk of the records section of the Adjutant General's office in the War Department, who merely presented some records.

Next was Kenneth Anderson, clerk of the House Military Affairs committee, who identified 30 subpenas for Speicher, which he said he sent to J. Edgar Hoover, Federal Bureau of Investigation chief.

Former Representative W. Frank James told how badly the committee wanted to ask Speicher about the loan for the artichoke farm and how he introduced a resolution to help out.

Money Order Identified

Gordon H. Ferris, who said he was a Western Union official, identified some $1,000 money orders filed by W. L. Sweet, jr., in New York. Speicher later testified that Sweet, manager of the company, for which Speicher sold tires, was moved by the artichoke farm difficulties and wired the money to lend Gen. Williams.

Speicher testified he saw Williams, frequently about a test for his inner tubes on War Department vehicles.

One day, said Speicher, the general said he wanted to borrow a little money. Speicher said he replied, ". . . I'll see what our Mr. Sweet thinks about it." So he got the money, he said, and gave it to the general in a hotel room. The general gave him a note and he sent it to Sweet, Speicher testified, but Sweet sent it back with the signature punched full of holes. He identified the note and it was placed in evidence.

Warned of "Trouble"

The Silvermans never told him to stay away from the House investigati , Speicher said, but kept telling him he was in for a lot of trouble if he came back to Washington. Joseph Silverman, he said, told him to go to Tommey Ryan's office and ask for the circus tickets.

"I knew what he meant," Speicher testified, "and I introduced Schnure on the telephone as 'Dr. O'Brien.' He would go there and get tickets. The first time there was $300." The total, he said, was $900.

Speicher and Williams met in a New York hotel room, he said, and "talked over the situation down in Washington."

"What did you and the others call the general?" inquired Goldstein.

"Why, we called him," Speicher told the court, "Grampaw."

The Homeless Ones

For their production of Maxwell Anderson's "High Tor," which is opening tonight, the Washington Civic Theater players have returned to their old quarters in the Wardman Park Hotel, following a not entirely successful experiment in a large downtown playhouse.

That experiment may or may not have been undertaken because of a suggestion made in these columns at the close of the 1937-38 season. At that time the point was made that Washington's single professional playhouse was surely not enough to satisfy the appetite of our theatergoers for living drama. That point we believe has been proved. For if the audiences attracted to the Civic Theater in its downtown location were not large enough to make the venture a financial success, they were nevertheless large enough to prove that these players fill a very definite need in the cultural life of the city.

It is a strange paradox that a city fortunate enough to have developed one of the most promising group theater movements in the country, is one of the few large cities which has failed to provide its theater with a suitable home. Indeed, many cities far smaller than Washington have shown a much clearer understanding of the place and importance of such a movement in the community life.

Here, it would seem, is an opportunity for a minor Federal project of great constructive value. There is available in Washington more than one bit of Federal property which, with a little remodeling by the WPA, could be made into a wholly adequate home, not only for the Civic Theater, but also for the Museum of Modern Art, the Town Hall, the Dance Association, the Film Society, and many other such groups that are now also without permanent homes.

No Minority Problem

It is an important declaration which Brazil has submitted to the Lima conference with the purpose of forestalling any minority claim which might be made upon the American republics.

The nations of this hemisphere are all nations of immigrants. Their populations consist, for the most part, of the descendants of those who voluntarily left their homelands to settle here and of those who, more recently, have followed in their footsteps. No group in any American nation, with the paradoxical exception of the indigenous Indians, can legitimately regard itself as a minority in sense that the term is used in Europe.

In this particular, the New World is far more fortunate than the Old. The existence of minorities in Europe has been productive of endless dissension and, latterly, made possible the successful assault on the sovereignty of Czecho-Slovakia. Lithuania may be only the latest country to discover that the presence of a large minority within a nation's borders is a source of weakness.

The Latin-American nations contain a great many Germans, Italians, Japanese and others whose sentimental and other ties with their country of origin remain strong. There is nothing inherently objectionable in that. The danger arises when their presence in this or that American nation is used by their country of origin as a point of leverage to accomplish certain political or economic ends.

That this danger is not exaggerated is seen in such statements as those made by the spokesmen of the Nazi regime at the recent Stuttgart congress of overseas Germans. There the mantle of the Third Reich's protection was extended to Germans everywhere, regardless of their place of residence or their political nationality.

It is against such an attempt to extend the European system to this hemisphere that the Brazilian declaraion is directed. Citing the fact that the "system of protection for such minorities (in the European sense) cannot be applied in America," the declaration would bind the American republics to the thesis that "they do not admit . . . any rights, privileges or special guarantees for any human group different from the general mass of national population and considered as collective entities."

In other words the rights and privileges enjoyed by individuals in the countries of this hemisphere they enjoy as residents of those countries and not as foreigners. For obvious reasons the attempt to create national minorities in the New World, tied by apron strings to governments of the Old, must be strongly resisted, as the Brazilian declaration maintains.

Headache For The AAA

The refusal of tobacco and rice growers to accept compulsory marketing quotas for 1939 raises some very sharp questions concerning the future of the AAA. Farmers growing these two crops have decided that they would rather face the prospects of surplus production and declining prices than to have their output drastically cut by Federal regulation.

Secretary Wallace takes an optimistic view of the referendum returns because cotton growers voted for another year of drastic quota restrictions while tobacco and rice farmers were registering their disapproval. Apparently he sees no threat to the AAA in last week's voting as a whole. But that attitude ignores some of the underlying implications of the returns.

The agricultural adjustment act of 1938 is based on the assumption that the size of crops can be controlled so as to avoid burdensome surpluses and to give farmers "parity" prices or incomes. In tobacco that objective had been more than achieved, perhaps largely because of increasing demands. In spite of the fact that the total supply of flue-cured tobacco is the largest in history, the price is expected to average better than 22 cents per pound for this year. Parity price is 18 cents. But growers reacted to this situation by repudiating the proposed marketing restrictions.

Cotton prices are far below parity and the accumulated surplus is proportionately larger than in the case of tobacco. Probably the cotton farmers dislike Federal regulation as much as do the tobacco growers, but they were willing to submit to it once more because of their gloomy outlook. In other words, the AAA program is never so much in danger of collapsing as when it succeeds.

Secretary Wallace attempts to rationalize last week's voting by saying, in effect, that restrictions are needed far more in cotton than in tobacco. Less than two weeks ago, however, he was pointing out that these problems were interrelated. Since tobacco prices were high and cotton prices low, he expected a shifting of acreage to tobacco. With restrictions on cotton extended and those on tobacco relaxed, that shift will undoubtedly be accentuated.

It appears, then, that farmers growing tobacco will not have a reasonable chance to avoid heavy overproduction and lower prices. Continued rigid control of cotton will mean greater maladjustments for unregulated tobacco growers. Experience under the first AAA was sufficient to prove that a single crop cannot be successfully regulated without upsetting the balance of production for other commodities. Viewing the AAA as a unified system of farm control, therefore, it may be said to have broken down already.

Another point worthy of note is the way the law acts to restrict production even when prices remain well above the parity level. Growers have land, equipment and labor to produce at least 1,000,000,000 pounds of flue-cured tobacco per year. But the AAA proposed quotas totaling only 750,000,000 pounds, an increase of merely 2,000,000 pounds over the allotments of this year. With prices well above parity, a substantial increase in the quotas would have seemed logical. But quotas are determined by the amount of tobacco consumed in the previous year and the carry-over situation regardless of how high prices may go.

The effect of last week's balloting has been to demonstrate once more the extreme difficulty of controlling agriculture by a rigid formula set up in Washington. The quota system has been repudiated by the growers whom it served best. And it has been continued for cotton farms where it has probably done the greatest amount of damage by curtailing exports. That outcome is as ironic as it is confusing.

Not Father Coughlin

Archbishop Mooney of Detroit, in discussing Father Coughlin's radio broadcasts, recently pointed out that "the permission of church authorities to publish an article or broadcast an address definitely does not imply approval of the contents . . . much less does it make the article or address an authoritative statement of the Catholic position on the subject treated."

This point has now been re-emphasized in a statement issued by Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago. Father Coughlin, says Cardinal Mundelein, has the right vouchsafed to every American citizen to express his personal views on current events. But he is "not authorized to speak for the Catholic Church," and does "not represent the doctrines or sentiments of the church."

Clearly this goes further than Archbishop Mooney's distinction between "permission and approval." It constitutes, in effect, an unmistakable rebuke of Father Coughlin for disseminating views which do not represent the "doctrines or sentiments" of the church whose vows he has taken and whose cloth he wears.

In other words, when Father Coughlin speaks on the radio he does not speak as Father Coughlin. Those who defend him because he is a priest are wide of the mark. And equally wrong are those who attack the Catholic Church because they mistakenly assume that this over-advertised individual necessarily speaks in its name.

The Memel Election

Referring to the Sudeten area in his Berlin speech of September 26, three days before the conclusion of the Munich agreement, Chancellor Hitler said: "This is the last territorial demand I have to make in Europe, but it is a demand on which I will not yield."

A test of the sincerity of that pledge arises as a result of Sunday's general election in the autonomous Lithuanian district of Memel. As was anticipated, the Nazi party in this former German territory achieved an overwhelming victory. With 96 per cent of the eligible electorate reported as voting, all but three of the 29 seats in the provincial legislature are expected to be filled by members of the German party.

This is not due to Nazi propaganda so much as to the predominantly German character of this narrow strip of territory, just over 1,000 square miles in area and containing a total population of 150,000. Three years ago, before the Nazi party was powerful and when it was Lithuania's privilege to exercise pressures, the Memel district voted almost as solidly for German candidates. This is because some 90 per cent of its population are of German origin.

Even in 1919 there was no disposition to pretend otherwise. The port of Memel and a strip of territory bordering the railroad to the south and east of it, were not taken from Germany on grounds of self-determination but primarily to give the new state of Lithuania a harbor which it would otherwise have lacked. The German character of the district was so clear that under the terms of the Memel convention, concluded in 1924, the territory was given a large degree of autonomy, in spite of Lithuanian protests. Poland having early seized Vilna, the capital of Lithuania, that struggling post-war republic was the more loath to lose control over its only port.

The British and French governments, as signatories of the Memel convention, have now expressed to Germany their "hope" that the Reich will respect the autonomy of this Baltic province. In so doing they are tacitly reminding Hitler of his pledge of September 26. That is the only real obstacle to annexation by Germany. For Hitler could doubtless get Italy and Japan, also signatories of the Memel Convention, to announce a "hope" exactly contrary to and counterbalancing that now voiced by Great Britain and France.

Because it seems to involve a definition of Hitler's future policy the outcome in the Memel territory will be closely watched. Immediate annexation would, of course, confirm the worst fears of those who believe that Germany plans a rapid and unrestrained push towards the East. Continuation of the status quo, on the other hand, would encourage those who are willing to put confidence in the Fuehrer's word, and to give him credit for desiring readjustments on an orderly rather than a coercive basis.

The local leader of the Memel Nazis has further pinned the responsibility on Hitler by stating publicly that "the fate of Memel will not be decided here." Of course, it is in Berlin that the decision will be made.

But the probabilities would seem to lie against any immediate overt act by Germany. After all the Memel area, like Danzig, can gradually be incorporated into German territory in everything but name, leaving outright annexation for a moment when this will seem merely overdue recognition of a de facto situation. By such a policy Hitler can have his cake and eat it, too; can keep his pledge of September 26 and still anticipate the return of Memel.

An Economic Royalist

The Santa Claus North Pole Toy Combine seems an almost monopolistic enterprise at this season of the year. And one of its subsidiaries which really merits investigation by public-spirited citizens is the Capital Homecraft Club of this city.

The members of this club are the lucky fellows who are clever with tools and have workshops in their own homes. They are doubly lucky when they can at the same time indulge a favorite hobby and bring sunshine into the lives of unfortunate children. The construction and rehabilitation of toys for distribution to the needy is the object of the club and to further that a lot of overtime will be ungrudgingly worked between now and Christmas.

It is also reported that under pressure from this same Santa Claus there is, here and there throughout the city, much current activity in the dressing of dolls. Yet nobody is suggesting that a ceiling be put over the hours, or a floor under the remuneration, of those so engaged.

In fact the white-whiskered old gentleman is showing a good many of the traits of the proverbial economic royalist, with the difference that he exploits none who are not glad to be exploited in his behalf.

Plea For Socialism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: So long as the New Deal followed out the program of the Socialist Party (as it did the first four years) all went fine. Then the G. O. P. leaders checked up and found that the New Deal was doing this, whereupon they set up a loud howl about it. Foolishly, the Administration listened to them, and thereafter it followed the policy of subsidization instead of socialization. This is forcing it toward fascism, apparently without the Nation as a whole realizing what it is all about.

Socialization of national banks, public utilities and transportation would have largely solved unemployment, in addition to giving the National Government a new source of income. But the ruling class would not hear to this, because it would lessen the number of profitable rackets which they foist upon the public. Just why President Roosevelt should listen to this small group, which tries to sabotage everything he does, is likewise a mystery. After all, they did not elect the President in either 1932 or 1936; instead they opposed him with all their strength.

The Nation would have been far better off financially and unemployment would have been practically abolished had the Socialist plan been fully followed out. By shifting back and forth from left to right, the Administration really gets nowhere and the people are becoming increasingly impatient.

The G. O. P. would, of course, do no better if it were in power, because it also has been tried repeatedly and found wanting. It has no plan for solution of our economic and social problems. Like the New Deal, the Old Deal just aims to blunder along and hoodwink an ignorant population which is not versed in economics.

Georgetown Architecture

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: More power and support to Mrs. Elizabeth Draper and members of the Georgetown Progressive Citizens Association in their efforts to preserve the early American quality of architecture in that most charming section of residential Washington.

In fact, Georgetown is now the only surviving part of Washington that has resisted the encroachments of cheapness and ugliness so mistakenly known as "progress" and that is trying to uphold our earlier standards of culture and taste.

I wonder where merchants have gotten the idea that to turn a dignified store front into a Coney Island monstrosity will help them sell their goods. Certain local business blocks have been made hideous. It is too bad that Washington is not yet architecturally conscious enough to make zoning restrictions against these eyesores as other and more beautiful world capitals have done.

Not even our Christmas display windows have escaped the monstrous and the grotesque that seem to have broken out in a present rash. Some of them must be nightmares to impressionable children.

"State Is Made For Man"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anthony Eden certainly said something when he said that the state is made for man and man is not made for the state. To my way of thinking that expression of thought should be engraved above the portals of any government building in any country in the world.

In the last few decades the state has been dominating the individual in a disguised form. The Communist and Fascist states have established dictatorships which are making Mr. John Q. Public dance to the tune of military strength and systematic persecution of minorities. When the political dreamers tried to conceive the perfect state they thought that everything would work out as they had planned on paper. They did not consider that men such as Hitler, Mussolini, and Stalin would use personal ambition to stand in the way of achieving the perfect state.

Certainly the people of the totalitarian states in Europe are under the yokes of their respective governments. What they thought would be something which they could look up to with respect is now forcing them to look down with shame.

Broken Contract

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial in The Washington Post, December 8, anent the decision of the Supreme Court on the rights of the NLRB should have a very significant interest for the voteless residents of the District of Columbia. I call particular attention to the following.

"We think," the majority opinion says, "that the brotherhood and its locals, having valuable and beneficial interests in the contracts, were entitled to notice and hearing before they could be set aside."

If this does not also apply to the contract of 1878, in which the Federal Government agreed to pay 50 per cent of the expenses of the District of Columbia, then I know nothing of the English language.

Congress, at its next session, should give authority to an agent of the District of Columbia to bring suit to recover from the Federal Government any and all amounts that have not been appropriated toward the upkeep of the District of Columbia, since Congress saw fit to change the conditions of the contract of 1878 without the consent of the voteless citizens of these United States who have no representatives to speak for them.

I maintain, without prejudice against the District Commissioners, that they do not and cannot act for the citizens of the District of Columbia for the reason that they are not under control of the said citizens. They are, in fact, creatures of Congress, confirmed to office, to spend the money collected in taxes and the pitiful handout of Congress, representing about 10 per cent of the annual budget.

I have been doing some figuring lately and have come to the conclusion that there is due and payable to the District of Columbia, from the Federal Government, upward of $250,000,000.

Why then should the District of Columbia lack any facilities it needs? Proper equipment, such as schools, playgrounds, Fire Department, libraries, court facilities, etc., could be built without borrowing funds from the PWA or any other agency.

The remedy is plain; Congress should give its consent allowing the District of Columbia to bring suit to establish the exact liability of the Federal Government to the District of Columbia under the contract of 1878 and should appropriate sufficient funds to carry the matter through, even up to the court of last resort.

I have no ax to grind as I am now a voting citizen of Virginia, who became tired of waiting for a vote, after a residence of about 30 years in the District of Columbia.

Puerto Rican Protests Squeeze Play

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent press release reveals that the State Department intends holding public hearings leading to further reductions in tariffs on Cuban products. In each of the proposed schedules (with the exception of potatoes) Puerto Rican production is directly affected and action is certain to depress prices in island industry lately subjected to increased production costs as the result of the wage-hour law.

The proposals do not involve a new reciprocal treaty and for that reason Puerto Rico is helpless. We cannot appeal to the United States Senate to save us from being used as publicity material for the good neighbor policy. A few schedules can be revised because the State Department wishes to impress Central and South America with the generosity of Uncle Sam in her treatment of Cuba. So schedules affecting continental production that might stir up home opposition are included. The hearings will be held for window dressing purposes. Cuba will get the schedules cut and Puerto Rican economy, dangerously damaged by the wage-hour law and new sugar cane harvesting restrictions, will be adversely affected.

One of the schedules for which downward revision is proposed is rum. Originally Cuba was accorded a 20 per cent tariff benefit on rum and a few years ago the tariff was further reduced by 50 cents a gallon to the present rate of $2 a gallon. In layman's language this represents a cut of $1.40 a case. By taking little bites out of the tariff from year to year rum and other production can finally be brought so low that the Puerto Rican industry, affected by wage-hour laws, American production methods and the higher costs of manufacturing under the American flag, will be forced off the market.

Tobacco as well as rum is included in the proposed reductions at a time when Puerto Rican stripping sheds are closed because of the inability of producers to pay the new wage scales. While Congress boosts wages to prohibitive levels, the State Department gets to work to reduce the tariff rates on the island's chief competitor. Sugar, an industry that is to suffer a pay roll reduction of between 20,000 and 30,000 people as the result of the 1939 harvesting restrictions, comes in for further Cuban tariff reductions.

Is it the policy of the Federal Government to force Puerto Rican production costs clear through the ceiling and Cuban entry charges down into the basement for the purpose of ruining Puerto Rico altogether? Puerto Rico is utterly helpless in matters of this sort. We have neither Congressmen nor Senators to fight confiscatory regulations and laws. The State Department can proceed in our direction with perfect assurance that there will be no kick-back such as could be expected if one of the States were so drastically affected.

The Post Impressionist

Witchcraft

A YOUNG WOMAN in Washington recently applied to a judge for protection against witchcraft. He was unable to help her; we have no laws against it.

They are wiser in Panama. They have a code there against sorcery; I know for I have used it.

Among the cooks who flitted in and out of my kitchen there was one who roosted long enough for me to learn something of her. She was a gentle brown creature known to me as Eloise, but to her intimates by the tenderer name of Birdie. She had some elementary knowledge of cooking, a faint intelligence, and a docile nature that found it easier to obey than to disobey. For a time I hoped I had solved a difficult problem.

Few of the servants lived in our houses. They would climb up the hill as the sun was rising out of Panama Bay, do their alloted work, and at night they would go down through the long avenue of Royal Palms to their beloved Guachapali.

One morning Eloise did not appear but the laundress did. She was a great black woman with an accent so strange that I found it difficult to understood and impossible to reproduce. I asked her if she knew anything of Eloise.

"Mom," she answered, "mammy, she very sick; oh, yeah, mammy very sick."

I had learned by then that "mammy" was Lucia's generic word for woman.

"You mean Birdie is sick, Lucia?"

"Oh, yeah, Mom, Ole mammy she do sortilege; Birdie goan die."

"Mercy, Lucia, she can't be as ill as all that. She was here yesterday working."

But Lucia continued to shake her head ominously and mutter. So I went to my very intelligent nurse. Strangely enough she was the daughter of this odd creature who seemed to me scarcely a step out of the jungle.

At first I could get nothing out of Henrietta but murmurs about a "lot of foolishness." At length, as I persisted, the story came out.

The preceding Sunday Birdie, or Eloise, had gone to a party. There she had met a young man whose attentions she encouraged with enthusiasm. Unfortunately the young man was engaged and his fiancee was the daughter of a woman who was reputed to be a witch.

The night before Birdie had been attacked at intervals by mysterious spasms, and her friends believed that the Sorciere had made an image of her into which from time to time she stuck pins. Birdie's seizures were caused by these pin-thrusts. Under this treatment Birdie would gradually weaken and eventually die.

I determined that no Sorciere was going to do me out of a good cook. I decided to go to see Birdie. Guachapali is made up of great clumps of two-storied wooden buildings with galleries running round them. A door and a window, a door and a window continuing on apparently to infinity punctuate the walls of these structures, and every door leads to an apartment.

Into one of these warrens I went demanding Birdie. Clustered around the doorway was a group of people. I made my way through them to find still more cluttering the dim room, where on a bed in the corner lay my cook. Her friends were all standing about in aimless silence. Birdie was lying quite prostrate staring through the window opening.

I asked her if she had seen a doctor, but I could get no very definite answer to this. Then I said I would get my own doctor and bring him to her. This brought immediate and violent objections from all the friends. There was something about sick benefits and insurance involved, and I gathered that if she saw any doctor but the insurance man she got no money. As we were discussing this, suddenly Birdie sat up in bed and began to moan and pant and claw her chest.

"See," said a woman, "that's what she's been doing ever since last night. Just as she crossed the railroad tracks coming home the first spasm struck her and she's been having them ever since. She's going to die."

"She's not going to die," I retorted. "I shan't let her. This is all nonsense."

I walked over to the bed. Birdie had fallen back on her pillows. Her eyes, staring at the window frame, were the eyes of a terrified and tortured animal.

"Eloise," I said, "what is it, where does it hurt you?"

But she did not answer nor turn her tortured eyes to me.

My Irish blood began to boil.

"I'm going to stop this," I cried. "And you all had better go. You're frightening her to death."

But the friends stood immovable and I was conscious of their sardonic gaze as I walked out.

The more I thought about it the angrier I got. I began to be afraid they really would frighten the little idiot to death. And in spite of my brave words I wondered how I was going to stop it.

When I got home I reported to Henrietta. More mutterings about "foolishness" came from her, and finally an illuminating sentence.

"In my country we have laws against Sortilege."

Henrietta came from the island of St. Lucia.

"My word, Henrietta," I cried, "maybe they have them here. I'll have the old devil arrested."

I went to the telephone and called up a clever Panamanian lawyer whom I knew, and in 10 minutes I was in his office. I told my story, and he said they did indeed have laws against sorcery and he would investigate the case at once.

They caught the witch redhanded collecting earth from the graveyard at midnight. In her room they found a crude little figure with pins sticking out of its chest. The witch went to prison and I got back my cook. You see they manage those things well in Panama.

More About Jimmy

NOBODY IS GOING to defend the conduct of the Dies committee in permitting a loose-lip person to run off at the face about Jimmy Roosevelt's contributions to churches. And Jimmy himself can be criticized in the matter only because he gave a soft answer instead of telling the Rev. Gossip to go to hell.

PEGLER

But to say that this testimony sounds a new low in personal abuse and in the misuse of authority is to forget that the Administration itself horned the pitch for this sort of scandal when it singled out opponents of the New Deal for smearing with insinuations of unethical and immoral conduct in their tax returns and again when the Senate Lobby Committee was authorized to investigate the tax returns of men who had lobbied against the reorganization bill.

"THERE WAS A TIME," Jimmy said, in his own story of his income and his tax published last August, "when I was childish enough to think that one's personal income was more or less a personal matter to be revealed only if it became a question of whether one was a thief or something like that."

Well, so thought we all of us, but Jimmy, at least, was protected from an official inquiry which might have searched for bugs in his returns and publicly traced every dollar of his income to its source and, when he did come through, enjoyed the services of a very sympathetic interpreter. Other Americans, including a few as guiltless of fault as he claims to have been, were not that lucky. And it made no difference whether they were having nervous indigestion or not, and if anyone had been fool enough to say that such an invasion of his privacy was making him sick the White House claque would have set up a hilarious propaganda that the dirty economic royalist was suffering from too much caviar, champagne and heavy gravy.

BECAUSE HE WAS genuinely sick, he has been depicted as a martyr, although, in the course of his story, he did admit that he used a method having the earmarks of a clever little scheme to effect a saving in his Federal and State income taxes, even as other law-abiding citizens.

The outrage against Jimmy in the mouthings of the preacher before the Dies committee, who had no real testimony to offer but merely wanted to gossip to a Nation-wide audience, points to the practice of using Congressional authority to bulldoze private citizens. It is a conspicuous case but typical of a method of inquiry which can make the sneering examination of a county seat shyster seem like coddling.

THE DIES COMMITTEE undoubtedly has struck pay dirt in its inquiry into un-American activities, but it turns up so much muck for each trace of evidence that even those who hoped against hope that it would settle down and do business in an honorable way will be compelled to give up. The fact that the Communists and the Nazi-Fascists both have squawked in turn proves that the truth turned up occasionally in the course of the inept and incoherent investigation and nobody will be more pleased than they by the final and convincing act of stupidity which will discredit the committee for good.

They will deplore it as a shocking injustice to Jimmy Roosevelt and a symbolic violation of the rights of all innocent private citizens, but they will be jubilant over the smearing of the committee itself by its own ignorant conduct, for every fact of genuine evidence brought out in all this time will be discounted by the public.

THE OFFENSE AGAINST Jimmy does not, however, have any bearing on the questions which he undertook to answer in a favorable, general way, free from the scornful and insinuating questions which other citizens must endure from hostile examiners when, for no more valid reasons, their incomes and taxes are under investigation. The son of the President was spared such inquiry.

Jimmy is not the only one who once was childish enough to think that one's personal income was a more or less personal matter to be revealed only if it became a question of whether one was a thief or something like that. For all that any official agency has done, his income still is a personal matter by contrast with the experience of other private citizens.

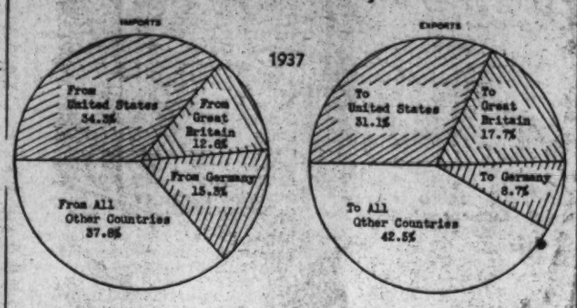
Japan Holds Only Seventh of Invaded Zone, Chinese Say

Shanghai, Dec. 12 (AP).—Chinese military leaders asserted today Japanese armies occupy only about one-seventh of the area of 11 provinces included in the principal zone of the Japanese invasion.

The Chinese said the invaders occupy only 119 hsien, or counties, in the 11 provinces, which have a total area of 550,000 square miles and 375,000,000 population.

Latin-American Trade

A Statistical Analysis



IN RECENT months there has been much discussion of the economic penetration of Latin America by the so-called authoritarian states.

In 1937 imports of German goods by 20 Latin-American countries were 28 per cent greater in value than in 1936, and imports of Japanese and Italian goods showed respectvie increases of 19 and 35 per cent.

These gains, however, were not markedly different from those of other countries. Due to general economic improvement in 1937, Latin-American imports as a whole increased by 28 per cent over the preceding year, and all the great commercial nations shared in this improvement. For the United States, for example, the gain was 40 per cent, for Great Britain, 20 per cent; for the Netherlands, 43 per cent, and for Belgium, 35 per cent.

THE IMPORTS from Germany in 1937 increased only at the average rate for all countries, and Germany's proportion of the total was practically the same for both years—15.4 per cent in 1936 and 15.3 per cent in 1937.

Japan and Italy likewise failed to improve their relative positions. Each of these countries supplies less than 3 per cent of Latin America's imports, and each is surpassed by France and Belgium.

Meanwhile, the share of the United States in this trade rose from 31.5 per cent in 1936 to 34.3 per cent in 1937.

AS IS SHOWN in the chart above, nearly half of the trade of Latin America is with the United States and Great Britain. The share of Great Britain alone in 1937 was about equal to that of Germany, Italy and Japan combined, and the share of the United States was double that of these three countries.

Firm's Head Admits Control Of Bottle-Making by Patents

Monopoly

Smith told the committee that only two companies, the Owens-Illinois Glass Co. and the Hazel-Atlas Glass Co. have been granted unrestricted licenses to manufacture any kind of glass container, and only one, Corning Glass Works, has received unrestricted rights to manufacture "specialty" ware.

Milk Bottles Restricted

In the milk bottle industry, he said, but three companies have been licensed to manufacture that product in unlimited quantities, although several others can make them subject to restrictions. Smith said producing capacity is "way above consumption" in the milk bottle industry, adding: "If the capacity couldn't take care of normal demands, so people were suffering for lack of milk bottles, we probably would grant new licenses."

Chairman O'Mahoney observed that Hartford-Empire has "a kind of AAA for milk bottles."

"Not so far from it," Smith shot back, "but used with some intelligence."

Speaking alternately in answer to close questioning, both Smith and Safford readily admitted defining through licenses the uses to which their wholly-owned machines could be put, and in many instances limiting the amount of their output, but both balked at charges of "price control."

Price Control Denied

"It all boils down, doesn't it, to an exercise of the patent power to control both production and price?" said Senator O'Mahoney. "If you control production, you also can control price?"

"No," said Smith. "We don't want to have anything to do with controlling the price of products made on our machines."

"You can control production?" said O'Mahoney.

"What they make," Smith said, "we can control."

"O'Mahoney said he saw no reason for restricted licensing, if it wasn't to prevent competition that might otherwise "affect the resale price." Smith conceded the company's policy might operate to "maintain the price" but said it was not designed to bring a given price level. He reiterated the purpose of restricted licensing was "prevention of ruinous competition," and maintenance of stabilized production and employment.

Policy Defended

The committee chairman said again he thought that such a policy indirectly operated to control price. This time Smith took no direct issue with O'Mahoney's statement, but merely added the words—"and stabilize."

When Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold asked the witness if he thought restricted competition in the glass container industry was a "good thing," Smith said he thought any policy "that puts a product into the hands of the consumer at the lowest possible price is socially desirable."

Arnold asked if the company was taking a "humanitarian and paternalistic" attitude in wielding its licensing powers and Smith replied that it felt "a moral obligation to help existing manufacturers to stay in business."

Not a Charity Job

"We get paid for it," Smith said. "We are not running a charitable institution."

"Would you rather have that power in private hands than in Government hands?" asked Arnold.

"I certainly would," said Smith.

Arnold said the witness was using "substantially the arguments in favor of the European cartel system" and Smith replied that he was not familiar with the cartel system.

Through cross-examination and submitted evidence, Cox meanwhile developed that in 15 years the Hartford-Empire Co. has netted $40,479,026 from its patents, of which $35,944,026 was derived from royalties and $4,535,036 from license fees.

Since 1932 Cox said the company has earned 90 per cent of its revenue from these two sources, retaining ownership of the machines under which glass containers can be most economically produced and leasing them to companies granted restricted use licenses. The Justice Department attorney said that 69 per cent of last year's glass-container production was manufactured under Hartford-Empire patents.

Employment Goes Down

A Justice Department statement said in the last 40 years glass production has steadily gone up while employment in the industry has gone down. Output of 1,100,000,000 glass containers in 1899 had risen in 1935 to 6,000,000,000, valued respectively at $21,500,000 and $120,000,000, the statement said. Last year the production reached 7,750,000,000 containers, valued at $160,000,000. But persons employed in the industry, the statement said, decreased from 28,370 in 1899 to 24,044 in 1937, as production per man increased more than six times over.

At one point, Cox introduced into the record memoranda on company policy said to have been prepared by the late Herbert Knox Smith, who was commissioner of corporations under President Theodore Roosevelt and later served as secretary and counsel of the Hartford-Empire Co. The memoranda said one purpose in obtaining patents was "to block the development of machines which might be constructed by others for the same purpose as our machines." . . . Another purpose, it said, was to secure patents on possible improvements of competing machines, "so as to 'fence in' those and prevent their reaching an improved stage."

Memorandum Quoted

Smith declined to fully accept the statement as representative of his company's policy, objected to the term "fence in" but said he would "not exactly" consider the policy outlined "improper."

When later another memorandum by the late Herbert Smith (no relation to the witness) was offered by Cox, who said it advised against licensing "price cutters," the witness mused: "He had a habit of writing every once in a while." O'Mahoney remarked that the former official "had a very lucid style."

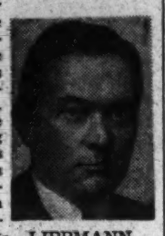
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Peace Between Business And The New Deal

SO MANY EARLIER efforts to make peace between industry and the New Deal have come to nothing that it is only reasonable to ask whether the many fine words and gestures of the past ten days are to be taken seriously. There have been striking declarations and overtures by the National Association of Manufacturers, speaking for industry, and by the Temporary National Economic Committee, speaking for Congress and the Administration, and the question is whether all this reflects a decisive change among businessmen and politicians, or whether it is merely artificial and wishful.



LIPPMANN

Time alone can, of course, supply the whole answer to this question. But there are, I believe, reasons for thinking that the present peace movement is more likely to prove the real thing than any which preceded it.

FOR WARS do come to an end though in the heat of battle the warriors can scarcely believe it. My reason for thinking that the war between industry and the New Deal has come to its end is that the issues of that war have been decided. That may sound like a strange thing to say in view of the fact that there are so many serious problems that are unsettled, so many measures that are still the subject of sharp dispute. But I submit that the battle has never in essence been about the New Deal measures in the abstract, the fighting issues in the political warfare of the past six years have been issues of power.

And it is these issues that have I think, for the time being been decided.

NO MATTER what individual New Dealers may have said or thought or dreamed about in the past six years, the energy which gave life to the New Deal as a political movement has come from three main sources of popular discontent.

The first was the discontent of the farmers demanding equality of treatment with industry, and whatever one is to think of the farm program as such, the fact remains that agriculture has won a kind of consideration from the National Government which it has not had for 50 years. The farm problem will be with us, no doubt, for generations, but the equality of agriculture with industry is now acknowledged by both political parties. In this sense the issue of power has been decided.

THE SECOND SOURCE of the New Deal's energy was the discontent of the industrial workers with the refusal of most of the great mass production industries to permit collective bargaining, and thus to recognize a right which workers throughout the world have come to regard as necessary to their protection and essential to their dignity as human beings.

Whatever one may think of the Wagner act, and I for one think it wrongly conceived and badly administered, the underlying grievance has been redressed. On the whole, American industry has reversed its previous position, and has acknowledged in principle that it will live with organized labor. This is not the end of the labor problem but it is the end of the particular and the primary labor grievance which the New Deal undertook to redress.

THE THIRD SOURCE of the New Deal's energy was the discontent of small businessmen and farmers, of small investors and of many consumers with the concentration of industry under the control of high finance and the large banks. This financial dominion of industry increased extravagantly in the post-war decade, and the crash of 1929 revealed its dangers and its abuses.

The financial reforms of the past six years have dissolved much of the power exercised by finance over industry, and have arrested the tendency toward economic concentration under financial control. The way has been opened up to measures which will go further toward restoring the system of competition and of free enterprise, and nothing more surely indicates how decisive has been the change of attitude than the general recognition that Senator O'Mahoney's inquiry into "monopoly" is in principle desirable.

THE NEW DEALERS, in other words, have won on the three fundamental issues for which they had a genuine mandate from the mass of the people. But like all victors in a war, they now face the much more complicated task of making a settlement that will actually work. The recent elections showed clearly that the people support them on the underlying issues. No Republican openly challenged the New Dealers on any one of the three chief issues of the past six years. But the elections showed no less clearly that the people are increasingly dissatisfied with the practical operation of many of the reforms. And, in fact, the New Dealers hardly ventured to defend all the reforms in their actual detail.

Moreover, the New Dealers know, and the rest of the country knows, that in an atmosphere of bitter struggle and with so many partially unworkable reforms, a normal recovery of economic activity is impossible. Because the engine does not work, the pump has to be primed continually, and only the most irresponsible among the New Dealers can have any doubts that endless spending is demoralizing and must in the end be disastrous.

THEREFORE, first, because they have won their real fight and, second, because victory confronts them with their real difficulties, it is reasonable to believe that the directors of the New Deal do, in fact, want the co-operation that only a genuine peace can bring. They have exhausted their mandate for fighting and they have still to make good their promises.

As they realize their situation, and I am convinced that the abler ones do realize it, the only path for them to take is the path of peace with industry. They will take that path, I believe, if the industrial leaders remain in their present mood, if the industrialists start no counter-offensive which revives the old fighting issues, if the industrialists understand that the only peace which is now possible is a peace based on the accomplished facts as to the new status of agriculture, labor, and high finance.

BUT IN ADDITION to all this there has recently come, it seems to me, a new influence into the whole relation between industry and politics. It is intangible. But it is perhaps more compelling than any other. It is the widespread realization among American progressives that after all the indictments of capitalism have been drawn up, the capitalist system is indissolubly bound up with democracy and human freedom. The spectacle of Russia and of Germany has put American capitalism in a new perspective. More and more American progressives who were once preoccupied only with the abuses of capitalism have begun to see also its triumphant achievements and above all its connection with their own dearest liberties.

This may not seem credible to many who remember the wilder speeches of the New Dealers when they were intoxicated with unaccustomed power. But I believe that I am reporting accurately when I say that in the minds of the New Dealers themselves there is in process a change in their fundamental prejudices—from a prejudice against business as such to a prejudice which makes them wish free business to flourish. And if that is true, if the emotional attitude is in fact altered, the chances of peace must at long last be much better.

Money Bag Own Alarm

Banks of Germany have adopted a new money bag which resembles an ordinary portfolio bag, but any attempt to snatch it causes it automatically to fire a series of loud alarm shots and to emit black smoke.

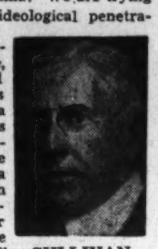
2 Ideologies In Conflict

By Mark Sullivan

Force Felt Here

WHAT IS SECRETARY of State Hull, and the United States, trying to do at Lima? We are trying to resist an ideological penetration.

That formidable phrase, "ideological penetration" is the latest of a series of terms arising in Europe which we in America have been obliged to become familiar with. We have learned "left" and "right"—those two words have fairly taken root in American politics. We have learned "purge," and seen a mild attempt at it in America. We have learned "authoritarian government," and "totalitarian government." Very recently we have become acquainted with "popular front" or "united front," terms long familiar in Europe. Through testimony before the Dies committee, "united front" has come into circulation here. "United front" is the name for a Communist technique in America. It means setting up organizations which do not call themselves Communists, which purport to have various purposes, but which serve the purpose of communism.



SULLIVAN

LATEST IN THE procession of phrases is "ideological penetration." To understand it, go back to where most of these terms, and all this current commotion, started. Go back to Moscow, in 1917. There, Lenin and Trotsky and others set up an ideology called communism. That was the beginning of the whole turmoil about government and society that for 20 years has spread through the world.

From Russia, Lenin and Trotsky sent agents and money to set up communism elsewhere. But in Italy, Mussolini, and in Germany, Hitler, set up a counter ideology. Mussolini called it fascism; Hitler called it naziism. But the two, always much the same, are increasingly one. They are now united and substantially identical. We shall have to call this ideology "Nazi-fascism." It would not be greatly misleading, at present, to call it simply naziism. For increasingly Mussolini defers to Hitler. Lately Mussolini has taken on the persecution of Jews, started by Hitler. More and more the common capital of the two branches of Nazi-fascism tends to be Berlin.

AS COMMUNISM has its world capital at Moscow, so is Nazi-fascism likely to have its world capital at Berlin. This development has deep meaning. Each of the ideologies ignores national boundaries, transcends citizenship. They are immense movements, each aiming to conquer the world, with their adherents having a fervor like that which has accompanied religious crusades. Both the ideologies aim to be religions. They regard existing religions as their rivals. They aim to crush religion in the usual and spiritual sense. They aim to get for themselves the devotion that men commonly pay to spiritual religions.

The rival ideologies—communism and Nazi-fascism—are much alike. About the only material difference is that communism denies the right of individuals to own property, while Nazi-fascism permits it. But Nazi-fascism's permission of private ownership has been narrowed down until not much is left.

THOUGH MUCH ALIKE, the two ideologies oppose each other violently. Their respective leaders and devotees hate each other bitterly. The conflict between the two ideologies now covers most of the world. In Russia, communism is securely established. In Germany and Italy, Nazi-fascism is securely established. In some smaller European countries, variations of Nazi-fascism prevail. In Spain, for more than two years, there has been civil war between the two. In France there has been two years of controversy, with Nazi-fascism at the moment in the ascendant.

The controversy has spread to Latin America. To offset the penetration of Latin America by one or the other or both of these ideologies is mainly the purpose of Secretary of State Hull's journey to Lima, and of several other steps the United States is taking. We are resisting "ideological penetration." The purpose is good. We do not want to see either of the two ideologies take root in South America. We do not want to see Latin America torn by controversy between the two ideologies.

BUT WE WOULD be tragically blind if we failed to realize that the same controversy between these two ideologies which is taking place nearly everywhere else is taking place also on the soil of the United States. Here, as nearly everywhere else, it was communism that first sought to establish itself. The Communist ideology, in some cases actual Communist organization, has penetrated into some of our labor organizations, into some schools and colleges. There is evidence, strong enough to be disturbing, that the Communist ideology exists in some areas of the Government.

As everywhere, when communistic penetration becomes apparent or suspected, the Nazi-Fascist ideology arises to resist it. The pattern in the United States is taking shape much the same as in other countries. Unless we have better fortune than there is any strong reason to hope for, we shall find ourselves following the course of some of the strife-torn countries of Europe. The development in the United States has some similarity to the development in France, though as yet we are at a much earlier stage.

New World Balance

By Barnet Nover

The Defense Problem At Lima

IT IS YET too early to envisage the results likely to emerge from the current deliberations at Lima. The conference is still in its speech-making stage. The committees have only just got down to work. The treaties, conventions, resolutions and protocols by which this parley will be remembered are yet to be drawn up and acted upon.

NOVER

But one thing has already become quite clear. That is the dominant role played by the problem of defense. In a very real sense all the republics of this hemisphere feel their security threatened as a consequence of the developments of the past few years. All of them feel that something ought to be done to prevent the New World from becoming the battleground of forces plaguing the Old.

BUT WHAT? Lima, so far, provides no effective answer. It is obvious that any proposal involving a military alliance of the American nations would be voted down even if it ever got to the voting stage, which is most unlikely.

Military alliances are not and never have been in the United States tradition. Except during the Revolution, when France and Spain came to our support, we have avoided alliances even in war-time. Thus, though we fought side by side with Great Britain and France in 1917-18, we were never those nations' ally. And certain other American nations, notably Argentina, feel very much the same way we do.

Alliances are not only made by nations but also against nations. Argentina wants no alliance that would tend to emphasize the differences that obtain between the nations of this hemisphere and certain nations of the Old World.

THERE IS A further objection to a military alliance in this hemisphere which needs emphasis. For some time certain of the Latin American nations have been engaged in building up their armed forces. Each of them can give perfectly legitimate reasons for doing so and in a number of cases—of Colombia is the latest—the United States is helping by providing military and naval officers to serve as technical advisers. But within the framework of a hemisphere defense system this tendency toward increased armaments would unquestionably be given a very considerable impetus with results that might be far from salutory.

Although the New World is profoundly peaceful in contrast to the state of affairs that obtains elsewhere, the war spirit has not entirely been exercised here. Not long ago Bolivia and Paraguay engaged in a suicidal conflict lasting three years. And that conflict only came to an end because both sides had reached the point of utter exhaustion.

SINCE THEN a real atmosphere of peace has developed in this hemisphere. A whole series of disputes has been settled by peaceful means. But it cannot be taken for granted that from now on there will be no further resort to war in these continents. Any encouragement to militarism, therefore, should be avoided.

Yet the possible danger of aggression from without cannot wholly be discounted. Is that threat to be met individually or collectively? The same question that for so long has faced the world now faces the Americas.

The Dominican Republic and Colombia have proposed the creation of an American League of Nations involving, presumably, the establishment of a system of collective security in this hemisphere.

How far that proposal will get remains to be seen. There is strong opposition to it and the fact that Mr. Hull saw fit, even before the conference formally met, to oppose the isolation of this hemisphere from the rest of the world suggests that the plan is likely to die a-borning. Yet already, at Buenos Aires, the American republics did agree to consult together in the event of outside aggression against any one of them.

The logical sequel of that pact is the creation of machinery that would make possible the automatic consultation of the American republics in the event of a threat of war.

WHAT FORM this machinery is to take is certain to be a subject of considerable debate. A starting point for the discussion is Venezuela's proposal which not only calls for immediate consultation but also insists on common action against outside aggression.

If there is thus no likelihood of an American League of Nations something resembling such an institution may emerge from the Lima deliberations. Would it have more success than did its prototype at Geneva?

Geneva's difficulties arose in large measure from two related factors. One was the absence of certain powerful nations, such as the United States. The other was the lack of agreement which not infrequently characterized the attitudes of the great powers that were members of the League.

In the case of a Pan-American peace system neither of these obstacles would be present. There is only one great power in this hemisphere and that power—the United States—has, since the days of Monroe, taken the position that this Nation could not tolerate an attack by European powers on American nations. And there are no absentees at Lima as there always were at Geneva.

The nations of the New World are obviously groping toward a system of collective security of some kind. The impulsion is the threat of aggression from without. But there is also need to perfect the machinery of peace in this hemisphere to outlaw wars between American nations as well.

Baseball biggies act at times as if they were determined to forfeit public esteem and good will. Baseball is supposed to reflect sportsmanship, and the club owners would blast you if you suggested that they didn't care much about this angle. Yet Babe Ruth, idol of the fans, remains out of baseball because no club can find a place for him and now Frankie Frisch, one of the greatest Giants of all time, is out in the cold and the bosses of that club lift their eyebrows with a "What of it?" expression.

"Heart of the North" Is True to "Mounties"

Will Clear Up Many Points of Doubt; Altgeld Role Suggested for Muni; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THE time has come for some of us ignorami to be put in our place.

There is, it seems, no such organization as the Royal Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, nor Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, nor yet Northwest Mounted Police. They exist only in fiction. That famous force of "Redcoats," who preserve law and order on land, sea and river over vast sections of Canada, is the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

BELL

And, most of the time, the "Redcoats" do not wear red! They wear a brown forage tunic, heavy blue pants, with gold side stripes, and a standard type of high boot, all topped off with the characteristic flat-brimmed Stetson, or, in winter, a fur hood.

These, so I am told, are a few of the facts that will be made evident in the Warner Brothers' film production of "Heart of the North," opening Friday on the screen at the Earle Theater, since this picture boasts a rigid authenticity as to detail and is photographed entirely in Technicolor.

If you were to go into the matter at all deeply, so I hear, you would discover that that term "Northwest Mounted Police" was given the parent organization from which sprang the present big and efficient force, over 100 years ago, when first one little band of them and then another went into the Northwest territories to spread law and order among the rampageous and help cope with a growing Indian problem. Before that time the Hudson Bay Company's employes had policed the area.

Later, the force became known as the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, then the Royal Northwest Mounted Police and, finally, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Never Irk a Mountie

A modern "mountie" becomes quite irked if you persist—as do most of the careless fiction writers, comic strip artists and dramatic editors—in using "Northwest." They are proud of the fact that all Canada is their beat now, and the coastal waters on each side. A large percentage of the personnel is now afloat instead of a-horseback and their ships patrol even the Arctic shores and rivers. About 10 per cent remain mounted, in the sense that they are able to use horses in the discharge of their duties. Even fewer of the mounties do much mounted patrol riding. A greater number travel the airways.

"Heart of the North" deals with these modern Royal Canadian Mounted Police—the sort who use airplanes. In the top roles are an array of Warner Brothers players especially adept at this vast-open-spaces type of drama. Of particular interest among them will be Dick Foran, the amiable and handsome "singing cowboy," who recently made a fine impression in a week of personal appearances on the Earle stage. Gale Page, Gloria Dickson, Patric Knowles, James Stephenson, Allen Jenkins, Anthony Averill and little Miss Janet Chapman are a few of the others.

The history class is now adjourned.

"Forever Yours," British-made musical film romance, starring the great tenor, Beniamino Gigli, will be presented tomorrow and Thursday at the Little Theater as chief feature of the second bill of the third week of the International Cinema Festival. On the same program will be shown "Steel, Man's Servant," a Technicolor subject, showing how steel is made, with Edwin C. Hill as narrator and Robert Armbruster's Orchestra providing the musical background.

If you can do with a little more information concerning future bookings in the local Warner houses, it ought to be interesting to know that "The Dawn Patrol" will be the Christmas week attraction at the Earle, with Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven and Donald Crisp heading the cast, under the direction of Edmund Goulding. "Going Places," a light-hearted romantic comedy, is scheduled for New Year's week, with Dick Powell, Anita Louise, Minna Gombell, Allen Jenkins, Walter Catlett—long time no see—and Thurston Hall in the featured spots.

The year 1939, it is pointed out by Zone Manager John J. Payette and his associates, will be brightened by an array of notable attractions from the Warner Brothers-First National, Paramount and Columbia studios.

Among the Warner releases will be "Juarez," with Paul Muni, Bette Davis and Brian Aherne; "Oklahoma Kid," with James Cagney and Rosemary Lane; "They Made Me a Criminal," featuring John Garfield and Gloria Dickson, who came to notice first in "They on't Forget;" "Wings of the Navy," with George Brent, Olivia de Havilland and John Payne; "Dark Victory," starring Bette Davis, and "Yes, My Darling Daughter," with Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn—remember them in "Four Daughters?"—and Fay Bainter.

"Zaza" Minus the "Can-Can"

Paramount's early attractions will include "Zaza," starring Claudette Colbert, with Herbert Marshall and Bert Lahr; "Say It in French," with Ray Milland and Olympe Bradna, and a Bing Crosby vehicle, "Paris Honeymoon," with Franciska Gaal.

From Columbia, the first 1939 offering probably will be "There's That Woman Again," a sequel to last year's mystery-comedy hit, with Melvyn Douglas and Virginia Bruce featured. Maureen O'Sullivan and Henry Fonda are now making "Let Us Live;" production also has begun on "Our Wife," with Cary Grant and Jean Arthur, and Frank Capra, as everybody in Washington knows, is busy at work on his next "Mr. Deeds" picture, which will be about a Western Senator in Washington.

But don't keep your Christmas stocking hanging up for all of these. Some of them may not be along until it is time to think of filling that Easter basket.

To dispel any notion that there is no nourishment in these film revivals being projected by the Little Theater in its International Cinema Festival, it might be noted that "The Private Life of Henry VIII," starring Charles Laughton, with Merle Oberon, Binnie Barnes, Elsa Lanchester, Robert Donat and all the rest, on Sunday came within a hair of breaking the house record. But then, "Henry VIII," of course, is one of Alexander Korda's finest jobs of celluloid wizardry.

When Bryan Foy, producer for Warner Brothers, returned to Hollywood from Chicago recently, he took with him a copy of "Eagle Forgotten," the widely discussed biography of John Peter Altgeld, the famous liberal Governor of Illinois during the '90s—sometimes referred to as the "father of the New Deal"—and is reading it with an eye to its possibilities as a picture of the "Zola" type.

Paul Muni already has been mentioned as the logical hero in a picturization of this story of an immigrant boy who rose to great political heights against tremendous odds and then risked all his gains in the political field for the sake of doing justice to the "underdog." It was Altgeld who pardoned the surviving defendants in Chicago's Haymarket case, a cause celebre of his day, not unlike the Tom Mooney case of the present.

Altgeld was Governor of Illinois, as I remember it, when Mayor Carter Harrison, sr. of Chicago was assassinated. The words "liberal" and "radical" were not so much in vogue then. Altgeld more frequently was described by the more malignant term of "anarchist." He should make a splendid role for Muni—provided Muni can grow a beard.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

LAMAR HARDY, who just announced his retirement as United States district attorney here, is a candidate for the New York Supreme Court job vacated by Charles Poletti. Felix Benvega, legal ace of Dewey's staff, is also an aspirant for the judgeship . . . Ganson Purcell, director of the Trade and Exchange Division of the SEC—which supervises the New York Curb Exchange—has been offered the presidency of the Curb Exchange. Purcell, who still is in his 30's, refused the job . . . Libby Holman now is completing the job of writing a play—a dramatization of her career in the theater.

MRS. ELEANOR ROOSEVELT has been invited to be one of the guest experts on the "Information Please" broadcast . . . The President's wife rejected it, for two reasons . . . The second reason was because the program's producers didn't want to risk having the First Lady embarrassed—and so offered to submit to her all the questions to be asked, in advance.

DORIS JORDAN is the newest Scarlett O'Hara hopeful. She was signed by David Selznick and has been receiving a salary from him for the last three weeks—without any assignment, as yet . . . Gov. Lehman, who returns to New York this week, is expected to appoint a New York City attorney as special prosecutor for Orange County . . . The newspapers recently announced that a Pan-American Airways pilot in Alaska had captured three cub bears, which had grown so large that he was offering them to anybody who'd take them. He received so many requests that now he's asking $250 for each bear. The Manhattan Zoo probably will obtain them.

THIS WEEK the front pages, covering the American Federation of Musicians' trial in the Supreme Court here, reported that one of the union officials was asked to state what the union's assets were and that he refused. He refused to divulge such information because another official once had been kidnaped and ransomed for $50,000—all because information regarding the assets had been published . . . As a matter of fact, the American Federation of Musicians' assets are no secret. They are published every month in the federation's magazine.

SPECIAL PROSECUTOR AMEN yesterday secured from Commissioner of Investigation Herlands all the data regarding the investigation of Lunacy Commission appointments and murder-case assignments in Kings County . . . Juffe, the defendant responsible for the bribery blow-up in Brooklyn, will go before the grand jury there on Monday to start the official investigation of corruption in the office of the district attorney. . . . Joan Crawford will follow Franchot Tone to New York next week.

HILDA TERRY, wife of Gregory D'Alessio, the Saturday Evening Post and Collier's cartoonist, suggested a cartoon idea for the New Yorker magazine. Her husband saw no merit, and so she drew the cartoon herself and took it to the New Yorker—along with six of D'Alessio's cartoons . . . Mrs. D'Alessio's cartoon—her first effort—was accepted. Her husband's were rejected.

HOMER CUMMINGS won't quit his Attorney General's job on January 1, as announced. His resignation will become effective January 21 . . . The Negro Theatrical Guild's show, at the Forty-sixth Street Theater tomorrow night, is for a worthy cause . . . The Rockefellers have offered Eleanor Holm a job at the Radio City Music Hall, to lead a water show now being planned for that theater. Eleanor can't take the job because the tank will be only 5 feet deep—not enough for diving . . . The Club Yumuri closed last night.

ALFRED deLIAGRE, JR., is planning to adopt the WPA Federated Theater's Swing production of "The Mikado" and its all-Negro cast. He has made offers to Maxine Sullivan and Buck Bubbles, to be starred in that show . . . George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" is one of the year's best films . . . The Financial Writers Association revue will take very strong pokes at President Martin, of the Stock Exchange, digging directly at his friendship with the Securities and Exchange Commission . . . District Attorney Foley, of the Bronx—one of the country's most efficient prosecutors—told officials: "Yes, my appointees are political. But I instruct them that nobody ever shall be able to campaign against our record."

In fashioning "Our Town," the Pulitzer Prize play of 1938, Thornton Wilder has achieved a miracle of simplicity, clarity and power.

Presented for the first time in Washington in the National Theater last night, this unique recital of life in a small American city, over a period of 13 years, left a more profound impression upon the minds and hearts of a large and receptive first-night audience than any drama in the recent years of the theater's renaissance.

"Our Town" unfolds its compelling recitation of the homely fundamentals of sound human living in three acts. The first introduces "the people of our town;" the second, "life and love in our town;" the third, death, the inevitable "uninvited guest" of every community of living beings. It is presented without scenery on a bare stage, lent the suggestion of illusion by the most meager of accessories—a few chairs, a table or two, two ladders, a trellis or two and an unobtrusive use of lights. With such economy of the usual "commodities of the theater" is disclosed the primary story of the human race; the intimate history of all who are born, live and die in the friendly relationships that so completely unravel the tangled problems of a complex and jangled world.

Is Expounded by "Stage Manager"

The play progresses under the watchful eyes of the Stage Manager, who interrupts the lines and action at frequent intervals to explain the circumstances surrounding the events that are being depicted, or make better known the character of some figure in the placid life of Grovers Corners, New Hampshire. A choir rehearsal is held in the orchestra pit. Players at times come upon the stage from the audience, making their entrances up steps at either side of the prosceium. The intimacy and informality add immeasurably to the realism and superb integrity of a work that glorifies the commonplace and views life in true perspective.

Only three days are lived in the action of "Our Town"—each from dawn until the last light in the town is out and Grovers Corners sleeps peacefully. As the play opens, the milkman is making his rounds, Joe Crowell is delivering his morning papers and Dr. Gibbs returning from an all-night vigil at the bedside of the mother of a new set of twins. The day goes forward as the neighboring households of Dr. Gibbs and Mr. Webb, publisher of the village paper, take up their daily duties—the simple but endless tasks of meals, getting the children off to school, tending the gardens, stringing the beans and performing the kindly services of good neighbors deep in each other's affections. So is the first day completed. The second, three years later, witnesses the wooing and wedding of George Gibbs, the doctor's son, and Emily Webb, the publisher's daughter; the third, after nine years, Emily's funeral in the little cemetery, high on the hills overlooking the town. It is all as homely, as vital, as impressive and as inspiring as life stripped to its essentials can be made by a writer of deep understanding and great human compassion.

By the skillful juxtaposing of the living and the living dead, the author has transfigured a third act of potentially gloomy and depressing content into an interval of inspiration, illumined by eternal verities that are as simple, gentle and moving as they are comforting and beautiful. No contemporary drama could more fully have deserved the distinguished honor of first award in its year than this.

The cast is so finely attuned to the spirit and unique form of "Our Town" that they cease to be actors on a stage, but become friends and neighbors in a life many in last night's audience were fortunate enough to have lived during the years embraced in the play. To commend every member of the cast—as each so richly deserves—would be the equivalent of patting on the back everyone who lives in your block.

Frank Craven, as the Stage Manager, deserves no lesser word than perfect. Evelyn Varden and James Spottswood, as Mrs. Gibbs and the doctor; Helen Carew and the veteran Thomas W. Ross, as the elder Webbs; John Craven and Dorothy McGuire, as the youthful lovers, and Tom Fadden as Howie Newsome, the milkman, are no less effective than Mr. Craven, pere. No jarring note is struck by any member of the cast.

"Our Town" is more than a great play. It is an uplifting and memorable experience in the theater.

King-Smith Players Offer Clever Comedy

That nostalgic air of "One Sunday Afternoon" fits neatly into the informal, clubby King-Smith Playhouse in Rock Creek Park. Players and playhouse combine to make an evening of artful dramatics out of James Hagan's play of the 1932-33 season.

Dentists seem to have a way with our dramatists, for like Mr. Odets' play of the present year, Mr. Hagan, in a quietly reminiscent mood, tells also of a dentist. Biff Grimes, time: the present, ruminating over some alcoholics with a pal, feels that perhaps he should have married Virginia instead of Amy. A flash-back gives us Biff, a quarter of a century ago, losing Virginia, why and how. Hugo Barnstead a colossal boor in earlier scenes, gets his deserts in the dentist chair.

It is a simple story which Keinert Wolff has directed with subtle simplicity. Set solidly and simply, with a surprising richness of effect of effect, its delicate humors are contrived through rapidly taken up cues, nicely detailed costuming and principals whose complete command shows them to be no novices. It was a perfectly prepared production.

Leslie O'Pace, as Biff, was blustering and shy, playing the lengthiest and, consequently, the most impressive role. Pauline Leveque as the flirt, Virginia, was a treat to the eye and vivacious to hear. She seemed reminiscent of Ina Claire. Evelyn Crump was a subdued, patient Amy, a perfect foil for the flashing Miss Leveque. Crawley was a thoroughly hateful Hugo, quite as he should be, and Charles Trainor, as Snappy, gave a neatly turned drunk scene with Mr. O'Pace. Others in the cast were: Frances Reeves, Gladys Caswell, Judith Owen, Yancy Gaugler, Martha Nash, Mickey McCann, Arthur Greenfield, Melvin Lertzman, John Marshall and Ray Gingell.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 12.—Nice to have Marlene Dietrich back. She never looked lovelier, but wonders what's happened to the gaiety of our town—everyone here seems sad. She wouldn't go for that up-hair business.

HEDDA HOPPER

"I couldn't spend that much time before my mirror," she said. "Then, too, it would make me taller, and I might come out looking like the Statue of Liberty."

On the other hand, Mrs. Jack Warner has piled hers oh, so high, which has given her great dignity. Ann was considered the most enchanting woman in Paris, and did she and Jack get palsy-walsy with the Windsors. They did! The Duchess now speaks with such a thick English accent she's almost incoherent.

When asked if they were coming to America, Wallis said, "I'm afraid they don't like us over there. There's a man named Pegler who seems to think we should stay home."

Understand the only objection to Wallis becoming a real Duchess is from the Duchess of Norfolk, because Wallis would precede her. Don't worry, she will!

Would it surprise you to find Shirley Temple is No. 1 at the box office again, with Clark Gable second, and Mickey Rooney third?

I overheard a 16-year-old beauty at the theater the other night, saying, "Imagine, they wanted me to go out with Mickey Rooney—they thought it would build up my sex appeal." Yes, she said build up!

Al Hall, who's down in Oceanside directing "Lady From Kentucky," has pleurisy—a temperature of 104—and other troubles. The picture calls for a mare that would foal December 10, shots of which were to go into the picture. They finally found one in Bernardino, but the trip from the mountains proved too much for the poor darling—her baby arrived at midnight on December 6! Haven't you heard, Al—you can't depend on those things?

After "Vacation From Love" hit Sheldon, Mo., with its population of 220, Truman Bradley, native son, was elected mayor. His mother's now on her way out here for the holidays. But, why, oh why, when he was hired because of his beautiful voice, don't they let him air it on that show of theirs? After all, he was good enough for the Ford hour for years. Maybe he's too good!

Don't you believe it when they tell you Doris Kenyon is considering the feminine lead in "King of the Turf."

Mickey Flynn Bryant (James McKinley Bryant) and Vic Dalton, Wesley Ruggles and Marjory Wellman Baker (now officially separated from hubby) are dining together—but often! Maybe a remarriage for Adolph Spreckles, jr., and Lois Clark. This squelches the rumor about that Adolph and Anita (Lin) Howard romance.

That clever dancer, Billy Daniels, may be doing "Begin the Begoin" in Earl Carroll's Club. He has a marvelous costume very much like one Garbo wore in "Mata Hari" with all the different bands which do everything Charlie McCarthy does—except speak. The hands, of course, are controlled and restrained by Billy.

Are other companies envious? Director Mitchell Leisen lunched every member of his cast and crew, numbering 110, and startled all the other high hats in the Paramount studio commissary by doing the Conga—complete with orchestra. And did we love it?

Andy Lawlor, who knows everybody—well, practically everybody—has just joined the Sam Jaffee and Ad Schulberg office. While abroad, Andy tied up some startling talent, and we'll be seeing 'em soon!

Aldous Huxley, in introducing Edna St. Vincent Millay the other night, gave his description of what poetry is: "Not ideas—but words." I can't quite agree with Huxley. I'd say it's ideas plus the right words!

That underslung Rolly with special Darrien body which nearly scrapes its fummy on the highway—and made to order for Countess di Frasso—is being rented for Claudette Colbert in "Midnight."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Annoyed by Relatives' Failure to Keep Dinner Dates With Them, Couple Ask if They're Overly Sensitive

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I hope you can tell me whether or not my husband and I are being overly sensitive. A relative and his wife greeted us with open arms upon our arrival here some time ago. We enjoyed their hospitality (no overnight visits) but for various reasons have been unable to repay them in kind. We entertain very seldom, and they are fully aware of the reasons why. Whenever we do any entertaining, it must be carefully planned for in advance, and a maid procured to help with the children and the cleaning.

Twice during the past year, when we had made plans to entertain this couple, they have telephoned on the day of the "party" to say that because So-and-So was in town just for the day, they wanted to have him out for dinner, or something of the kind. They said they were sure we would understand. Neither my husband nor I like to be treated that way. After the second incident, I said to my husband that I would not go to their house for dinner again. Yet I hate to have any misunderstanding. They are the only relatives we have in this town and they really are nice in their way. This all sounds very petty when written out, but I want to know what you have to say about it. Sincerely, X. Y. Z.

DEAR X. Y. Z.: To be intelligently aware is not necessarily to be overly sensitive. In view of your relatives' behavior, I think you are justified in assuming that they are not particularly interested in the brand of hospitality you are prepared to offer them. Moreover, I think they have been guilty of a lack of courtesy, in showing so little appreciation of your special efforts to entertain them. Inasmuch as they know your circumstances and the careful planning which must precede any attempt at party giving, I should say that they are being rude, or selfish, or thoughtless in the extreme (call it what you will) in calling off long-standing engagements with you at the eleventh hour.

It would be my opinion that the wife, in accepting the invitation in the first place, did so because she was asked so far in advance that she couldn't invent a plausible excuse for declining at the moment, but relied on future events and her own ingenuity to relieve her at the last moment of what she considered a tiresome engagement. In offering this hypothesis, however, I do not ask you to go to the extreme of believing that in the eyes of your Cousin Charles and Cousin Julia (let us say) you are a social pariah and an unutterable bore. I merely suggest the likelihood that the two families have little in common save the ties of blood kinship, a fact which the other couple probably recognizes rather more clearly than you do as yet, and that it would be a mistake for you to try to weave a close social relationship around that happenstance bond.

I think you should look at the situation from this angle: As your relatives, they no doubt felt conscience bound to show you some extra courtesies on your arrival here; but now that the gesture has been made, they probably would like to feel free to go back to their accustomed social pursuits, unhampered by any continuous exchange of family hospitality. I daresay they mean no offense; that they feel a genuine affection, a great good will toward you; and that they would be dismayed and regretful if you were to register resentment of their failure to keep their dinner engagements kith you. But I dare say they are also hoping against hope that you won't try to effect any permanent social alliance with them.

Inasmuch as the average long-time resident of any given city is forced, in very self-defense—as a matter of conserving nervous energy, of revitalizing personality—to set a limit to the number of his intimates, I think you should find it possible to digest such a theory of their conduct without letting it create a rift in the family relationship. Try to imagine the situation in reverse, with yourself and your husband as the old-timers here, and you relatives as the newcomers and ask yourselves in all honesty if you would have behaved any better.

With innumerable friends, acquaintances, business associates of your husband's, occasional out-of-town visitors, etc., all making some claims, large or small, to your attention, isn't it likely you might have succumbed to a similar temptation to pass up a "duty" affair for something which promised rather more fun? Or perhaps some professional profit to your husband? I think in similar circumstances, you might have committed the same fault, trusting to family indulgence to make it right. Such behavior isn't admirable, of course; but it is just about what one can expect, human nature being what it is.

My advice to you in this matter would be to take no offense, and at the same time to make no special effort to entertain the couple in future. Let them know the latch string is out, if they care to drop in of an evening, and that they are always welcome to take pot luck. If they continue to proffer hospitality to you, accept it or decline it, as you choose. They may be the sort of persons (there are a few) who definitely prefer entertaining to being entertained. They may really enjoy your company under their own roof, or under circumstances of their arranging, and yet feel a definite distaste for any social occasion which hints of strain. Perhaps the very exaggeration of your labors is the thing which robs your parties of appeal for them. M. H.

Shaggy Puff Ball Robe

Light and airy as a puff ball, despite its great warmth, is this great-coat of spun rayon. Of the many miracles wrought by rayon magicians, few are more marvelous than the deep piled woolly weaves, used for housecoats and beachwear. The puff ball, above, has as deep a pile as many a modern carpet or hearth rug. It is fashioned in glossy boudoir pinks or blues. A gift to warm the cockles of any girl's heart would be this cozy puff and the bunny scuffs to match.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Orchids and Onions

This column herewith announces the following recent awards of its H. O. F. C. (High Order of Feminine Civilization) medals:

To the salesgirl at a 10-cent store counter who, at the end of a feverish pre-Christmas Saturday, was still able to smile when she handed a parcel across the counter to a scowling shopper.

To the housewife who was able to say "no" graciously to the eleventh peddler who came to her door selling Christmas cards or homemade baubles.

To the drooping woman shopper plodding along in galoshes with an armload of parcels and an umbrella who patiently permitted the street photographer to snap her and then politely accepted his card to add to her luggage problems.

To the office girl frantically trying to do her work under the 40-hour week limit who stopped to take notice of the embarrassed stranger wandering around the office and politely inquired what he wanted.

To the housewife who, answering the telephone for the seventh time in one morning on a wrong number call and for the third time to a young man demanding to speak to "Birdie," answered sweetly, "Oh, that's all right" in response to the last apology.

To the mother on a crowded streetcar who made her young son get up and give an adult a seat.

To the Christmas shopper at the stocking counter who, when a clerk started to wait on her out of turn, stepped back and said, "This other customer was ahead of me."

To all women shoppers who, in spite of being nudged, pushed and elbowed, and in spite of getting confused, head-achy, wobbly in the knees and weak in the stomach, have been able to keep a little of the light of Christmas in their eyes.

The following have been recent additions to the column's blacklist:

The aggressive young woman in a silver fox jacket who, on a rainy night, pushed ahead of four more plebeian passengers who had halted a taxi, stepped into their chariot and went riding grandly away.

The dowager who entered the chain grocery store on a busy Saturday morning demanding to be waited on ahead of the other customers because her chauffeur could not stay parked in front but a few minutes.

The woman who did not remove her hat at the movie because it was "so little it would not shut off much of the view."

The woman who entered a bus at the crowded hour and held up a line while she opened her bag, rummaged in it and produced a pocketbook, then opened the pocketbook and drew out a $1 bill.

The woman in the cafeteria who held up the line exclaiming, "Oh, is that all the bigger serving I get?"

All women who call on the telephone and start out by saying, "Who is this?"

All women who have forgotten that the first step in civilization is to "play cricket."

How One's Attitude Influences Sickness

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

WE HAVE been reviewing in the past few weeks the nervous system and the six senses. It is appropriate to go on from that subject to discuss what that part of the nervous system which we call the mind can do to influence the body in sickness and in health.

Everybody must know instances of such an effect. In fact, our common speech is full of phrases which indicate such relationship—some sort of a sight made a person "sick at his stomach;" some emotion "broke my heart;" the mental processes of pity "turned his bowels to water."

But few people realize the extent of this relationship. There is no illness in which the mind does not play a part. As a wise physician has said, "There are two things to sickness—one is the sickness itself and the other is what the patient thinks about the sickness." If you can get the patient in the proper mental attitude toward what is the matter with him, you have often won half the battle.

And much of the illness of the world is due to the patient's inability to take the proper mental attitude toward his illness. He either thinks it is more serious than it is, or else he thinks it is not as serious as it is.

We have people with all gradations of attitude. There is the woman with a little indigestion that she thinks is cancer of the stomach, which it isn't at all, but her whole life is made miserable by refusing to accept that. On the contrary, we have the man who doesn't think his diabetes is very serious and thinks it doesn't need much treatment. He goes from bad to worse, simply because he refuses to recognize the fact that he is really sick.

One of the great advantages of modern medicine is the fact that treatment of these things is undertaken deliberately and consciously instead of haphazardly. The old-fashioned doctor with the good bedside manner, whose very presence in the sickroom made you feel better, was unconsciously using psychotherapy and mental hygiene, but since his day those specialities have become scientific and have been put on a rational basis. Their principles are understood and they can be applied consciously for the patient's benefit.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Dec. 12.

THE TALKATIVE taxi engineer of New York is a classic character by now. He loves to listen to the jabber of his fares, and to get in his 5 cents' worth of gabble if he is not out of order. Well, I rode with a honey the other afternoon. Joan Clair, who owns a big hair-dye business, and I were riding a hack on business bent—but we were talking about the little angels in the home.

ALICE HUGHES

Joan was telling me of her boys, soon to return from school for the holidays, and I was tossing in a few bits anent Martin, his loss of two baby teeth, and his gradual recovery from the lisp of babyhood. Well, I got out and went about my business. Three days later I met Joan again, and she said, "Well, I wish you could have heard that taxi driver after you left." So I said "Why?"

When I had gone and Joan was on her way, the hackie looked through his little window and said, "Well, you two ladies certainly made me very happy." When Joan asked how, he said, "You look like a couple of big-time ladies, and I haul a lot of your kind around town, but I never thought your kind of woman thought of anything but herself and business. And here for 15 minutes you are talking about your kids!"

"But why should that make you happy?" asked La Clair.

"Well," and here the engineer simpered, "I've just become a father myself, and it is nice to hear a couple of business ladies talking about children all the time." With that, he hauled out a snapshot of a very cute, small baby and handed it to Joan for inspection. Well, that beat me! That's the easiest way I've ever found of being a Girl Scout—changing small domestic chitchat with a girl friend. Isn't it something to have made a taxi driver happy?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Just a month ago George and Sylvia Lazar were married. Both work for the same firm, and they saved their pennies for a furniture fund. At last they had amassed the worthy sum of $300, and they happily drew it from the bank and set forth to buy the things for the new little home. And in the snap of a finger, and unaccountably, the $300 dropped from the young wife's handbag—and couldn't be found, after a long hunt. So our young Lazars are back on the job, sad but game—working hard every day to save up another $300 to fix up their three-room flat!

Your Figure

Daily Massage and Exercise Fill Hollows in Shoulders

Aids Appearance in Strapless Evening Gowns
Vigorous Brushing Helps Circulation
Stretching Bar Should Be Used

By Ida Jean Kain.

DO YOU look better in your evening wrap than you do in your decollette evening gown? You can, of course, "cover up" if you do not have beautiful arms and shoulders, but you won't be in the heighht of style this holiday season. The girl in the strapless evening gown that reveals alabaster shoulders is the one who will be the belle of the ball.

Extreme thinness through the shoulder girdle becomes the most conspicuous figure fault in a low-necked dress, and that is our starting point. What you must do is bring up the circulation through exercise, massage and the use of a bath brush. You can almost brush away those hollows and angles!

Lather the soap on furiously, and then scrub or rub with a coarse washcloth, being sure not to miss a hollow or an angle from those saltcellars about the neck to your elbows. Make this scrubbing a daily affair. It is an excellent circulation builder—besides, it will smooth unlovely skin on the tops of the arms.

Exercise Does It

Exercise, however, is the thing that does the business, and even a simple exercise like rotating the head works pure magic, especially when your concern is a scrawny neck or a double chin, or both. Stand erect with the head squarely on top of the shoulders, and turn the head slowly until the tip of the chin is in direct line with one shoulder.

Tip the head backward and slowly circle the point of the chin around and over the opposite shoulder. Do this 12 times, very, very slowly, and stop after each three times to relax the muscles. Always relax the muscles slowly.

An exercise that is fun to do is this one . . . in lieu of a punching bag, suspend a soft pillow in the doorway so that the pillow is about chest height and punch away as energetically as if you were in training.

Stretching Bar Helpful

This punching action firms the backs of the upper arms and helps to beautify the entire shoulder girdle. Keep it up for three minutes the first day, always punching with the arms at shoulder level, and putting force behind each blow. Be sure, also, to stand in erect posture with the tummy muscles pulled up.

Another good exercise for arms and shoulders is to grasp in the hands two books of about equal weight, bend forward from the waist with head and trunk in line, and with the hands, holding the books, down in front. Slowly rise until you are erect, body stretching upward, and as you rise, move the arms from the shoulders in wide circles, up, back and down. Bend forward again and repeat five times. Do not let the tummy muscles sag, and be careful to move the arms at the shoulders.

A stretching bar affords marvelous exercise for this region, and at the same time it firms and slims the midriff. If you have a stretching bar, now is the time to use it.

Vitamines in Olives

The value of the vitamin A content of ripe olives is practically lost to some of us because of our interest in the fruit itself. Yet, ripe olives are considered a good source of vitamin A and go through the process of preparation without any loss of this valuable vitamin. The daily habit of adding a few whole, ripe olives to the school lunch or the after-school snack has greater value for this reason.

Mrs. Townsend's Musicale Attracts Brilliant Throng to Hear Mr. Crooks

Robert Virovai and Robert Nicholson Also Win Plaudits at 105th Morning Recital; Mrs. Roosevelt Among Distinguished Guests

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

UP TO THEIR EARS in sables and silver fox, social and official notables by dozens and scores crowded into the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel yesterday morning for Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's 105th Musical Morning, the first of this season.

Richard Crooks, Metropolitan opera tenor, who for many winters has appeared on Mrs. Townsend's opening program, was the chief drawing card yesterday; but there were also two other good "reasons" for the crowd. Robert Virovai, 18-year-old Hungarian violinist on his first American tour, and Robert Nicholson, Australian barytone, making his debut in Washington, were the other artists successfully featured on the program.

For fully half an hour before the first song began, the lobby of the Mayflower was a moving mass of dowagers and diplomats, with a surprising number of debutantes thrown in for an extra measure of interest. As usual at events of this type, feminine finery was very much on display. Fox capes, jaunty veiled hats and costume jewelry setting off brightly colored silk and wool frocks were all over the place, as the audience, heavily studded with social lights, settled into the rows of gold chairs to listen to the varied program.

Meanwhile, outside, a near-panic was precipitated when a cry of "The doors are closing! The doors are closing!" rippled through the throng shortly after 11 o'clock. Around 50 men and women, arriving late, were kept outside until after Mr. Nicholson finished his first song.

Mrs. Roosevelt, trimly turned out in a burgundy fur-trimmed suit with a small hat to match, was also a bit late. She slipped into her box between the first and second numbers.

While all selections brought thundering applause, the hit of the program was an encore, "Un Peu de Pense," sung by Mr. Crooks, with Mrs. Townsend herself playing the accompaniment, her own composition. Always a regal figure, she looked especially so yesterday as she walked on the stage, wearing a becoming wine velvet frock with a tall turban to match. For other selections on the program, Frederick Schauwecker and Bernard Frank were the accompanists.

In keeping with her custom, Mrs. Townsend entertained at luncheon for the artists immediately following the cincert. The company that sat at the long center table in the Presilential dining room of the hotel included many idely known persons, both of Washington and elsewhere. The Minister of Hungary and Mme. Pelenyi were among Mrs. Townsend's guests; also, Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, George T. Summerlin, Capt. and Mrs. Chester Wells, Mrs. John Wilkins, Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, Mrs. Wilhelm vom Rath and her daughters, the Misses Mary, Cecelia and Eleanor vom Rath.

Still others at Mrs. Townsend's luncheon were Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Mrs. George Mesta of New York, Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat, Mme Van Kaathoven, Mrs. Richard Crooks, Mrs. Granger Blair, Mrs. William Powell, the former Miss Jane Thorpe; Mrs. George Grant Mason, who had on one of the snappiest ensembles there—a dark brown suit with a box coat trimmed in reddish beige fox and a matching brown turban held in place with a mesh snood. Also at the luncheon were Mrs. Mason's house guest, Senorita Arostegui of Havana, and Miss Margaret Graham Townsend, debutante niece of the hostess.

Several Luncheons Follow Concert

Miss Margaret Townsend, debutante daughter of Mrs. Effingham L. Townsend, who will make her formal bow to society at a small tea to be given by her great aunt this month, had guests in her box at the concert before joining Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's luncheon group. With her were Miss Maisie Howard, Miss Sylvia Alexander, Miss Eleanor Meem, Miss Angela Adams, and Miss Angelica Lloyd.

Lady Cecil Hanbury of London, house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Effingham Townsend entertained at luncheon at the Mayflower after the concert. Her other guests included Mrs. Tuckerman, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mrs. John Biddle, Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Mrs. Churchill Candee, Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne and Miss Anita Stephens.

Mrs. Joseph E. Washington was luncheon hostess after the concert, having in her party Mrs. Harry P. Huse, Mrs. Blackistone Wilkins, Mrs. John C. Fremont, Miss Jessie Fremont. Mrs. Edward A. Harriman, Mrs. Arthur Chicester, Mrs. J. Davis Brodhead, Mrs. Duncan Fraser, the former Miss Dorothy Sollers and Miss Eleanor Conolly.

Mrs. Maxwell Murray, wife of Brig. Gen. Murray, who is now on duty in Washington, was also a luncheon hostess. Her guests were Mrs. Ord Preston, Mrs. Mary Grant Rafter, Mrs. W. C. Crane, and Mrs. Cyrus Searcy.

Mrs. Delos A. Blodgett had as her luncheon guests after the concert Mrs. Thomas Lockwood, Mrs. Edward E. Robbins, Mrs. George Morrow, Mrs. Adam M. Wyant, Miss Antoinette Early and Mrs. Jack Hayes.

Lady Bradford Leslie and Mrs. Prentiss Coonley were others who entertained small luncheon parties after the musicale.

Plans to Attend Diplomatic Fete

Dinner Honors Visiting Singer

Capt. Chester Wells, U. S. N., retired, and Mrs. Wells entertained at dinner last evening in compliment to Robert Nicholson, noted barytone, of Australia, who appeared yesterday morning at the first of Mrs. Townsend's musicales this season. Mrs. Wells is a native of Australia and the fete which took place at the Metropolitan Club was planned especially to honor her countryman.

Guests in addition to Mr. Nicholson and Mrs. Townsend included Admiral and Mrs. William D. Leahy, Keith Officer, Australian Counselor of the British Embassy; Admiral and Mrs. H. I. Cone; Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. Albert Niblack, Miss Eloise Sargent, Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyon, Lynch Luquer, Mr. and Mrs. John Rowland Hill.

Mrs. Bliss Plans Luncheon in Honor Of Mrs. Grosvenor

Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor is the guest in whose honor Mrs. E. Goring Bliss has planned a buffet luncheon Thursday at her home on Reno road.

The company of 20 will include Mrs. Smith Hempstone, Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Mrs. William W. Bride, Mrs. Wilbur Collier, Mrs. Frederick Covell, Mrs. John Guider, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, Mrs. Lawrence Clayton, Mrs. Lloyd Wilson, Mrs. Robert Grahame, Mrs. Baxter Milne, Mme. d'Aulby, Mrs. William Weller, Mrs. John Remon, Mrs. Walter Clarkson, Mrs. Cabot Stevens, Mrs. Ralph Van Arsdale and Mrs. Jean Labat.

Vanderbilt, Jr., Here; In East for Christmas

Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., has arrived from California and is at the Shoreham Hotel for a few days before going to New York to spend Christmas with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt.

He has been traveling through the summer and fall and has spent considerable time at his ranch in Nevada. He visits Washington at least twice yearly.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

OGDEN HAMMOND, JR., is now en route to Florida with only a suit of tails by way of luggage. Before he was to depart on Saturday night, he left his car, jammed to the doors with bags, parked in front of the 1925 F Street Club. A burglar jimmied the door and took not only clothes, but also such things as cuff links and a cigarette case Mr. Hammond continued on his way in the clothes in which he was dining.

DUDLEY HARMON.

NOT CONTENT to let members of the Washington Ice Club steal all the glory with their snappy new skating outfits, a group of Washingtonians have started a Roller Skating Club, with the uniform to center around a pillow. Originators of the idea are Denys Smith, Bradford Ross, Malcolm Ross and Elsie Ekengren.

ANYONE who thinks that the occupants of mining camps out West go in only for straight whisky when they drink should be introduced to the cocktail which Mrs. Howell Moorhead served yesterday afternoon at the party she gave with her daughter, Ann. The hostess picked up the recipe in a saloon on top of one Rocky Mountains when she was making a tour last summer.

Miss Moorhead recently returned to this country after several years of study and travel in Europe. She attended Oxford for a time and joined Diana Rowland when the latter was skiing through Europe last winter.

MRS. MOORHEAD'S HOME on R street is most attractive, with its drawing room walls tinted a pale green, matched by the furniture. A bright fire was burning on the hearth, and there were vases of red flowers here and there.

The hostess, who served as chairman of the recent ball of Nations, wore a long black dress and jade earrings and necklace. Her daughter had on a black dress with a gold satin top with stripes.

Among the guests: Miss Christine Gawne, Miss Rowland, in a wine colored frock and tiny hat trimmed with an ostrich feather; Mrs. Ekengren, who combined both feathers and veil on her bonnet; Arthur Vandenberg, jr., Frederick Nichols, comparing notes on the Becker dance in Warrenton with Neil Conner and William McComb, Miss Florence Harris in black; Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ross, Miss Carolyn Chantry, Theodore Dominick, Mrs. Hugh Cummings, jr. and several others.

ARTHUR BRADLEY CAMPBELL, whose arrival in Washington is always the signal for a flurry of parties, was feted at one yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. James L. Houghteling. The host is Commissioner of Immigration and Mrs. Houghteling, the daughter of Frederic Delano, uncle of the President.

Their house on Wyoming avenue is large enough to hold a good-sized crowd without crowding. Among yesterday's guests were the Finnish Minister and Mme. Jarnefelt; the Counselor of the Danish Legation and Mme. Eickhoff; Miss Irene Boyle, in black; Mrs. Higgins Chapin, in black, with a touch of red on her hat; Ralph Snowden Hill, Maj. Ferry Heath, John Paulding Brown, Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., chic as always, and several others.

THE COCKTAIL PARTY heralded here the other day as taking place at Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock's this afternoon turns out not to be a cocktail party after all, but simply tea for three. Sorry we got it wrong.

Mlle. de With's Engagement Is Announced

By cable yesterday the staff of The Netherlands Legation received word from Mme. Van Haersma de With to the effect that the engagement of her daughter, Mlle. Nora Van Haersma de With, and Jonkheer C. Roell, of The Netherlands, has just been announced.

Mlle. Van Haersma de With, who was here much of the time while her father was serving as his country's Minister in Washington, has a host of friends here. She spent much of the past summer traveling in central and southern Europe, later joining her parents in The Netherlands shortly before her father went to Berlin to assume his new duties as Minister there.

To Fete Deb

Mrs. David St. Pierre Gaillard has issued invitations for a luncheon to be given in honor of Miss Aileen Gorges Wrightson on December 21.

Dinner for Dr. Ganz

Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Blake Mason have issued invitations to a dinner on Friday, December 30, in honor of Dr. Rudolph Ganz, noted symphony.

The party will take place at the Willard Hotel at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Broy, Wife of U. S. Consul At Brussels, to Give Luncheon

Mrs. Charles Broy, wife of the United States Consul at Brussels, will entertain tomorrow at luncheon at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Guests will include Miss Sybil Baker, Mrs. Frank Ballou, Mrs. Ephraim Peter Bower, Mrs. Leon Brusiloff, Mrs. John F. P. Byrne, Mrs. Charlton M. Clark, Mrs. Charlotte Colladay, Mrs. Allan Davis, Mrs. Carl H. Ellingson, Mrs. F. Thomas Evans, Mrs. May Thompson Evans, Mrs. Randolph Keith Forrest, Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, Mrs. Franklin Halpin and Mrs. William B. Hardy.

Also Miss Mae Helm, Mrs. George Sanford Holmes, Mrs. Golder Norton Kimmel, Miss Winifred Mallon, Mrs. Augustus Heath Martin, Mrs. James McKenna, Miss Mary W. Merrick, Mrs. John Daniel O'Leary, Mrs. Thomas W. Penn, Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, Mrs. Theodore J. Pickett, Mrs. Thomas Henry Clay Reed and Miss Janet Richards.

Still other guests will be Mrs. William Barrett Ridgely, Mrs. Glenn Alvin Smith, Mrs. Isabelle Geddes Smith, Mrs. Thomas T. Taylor, Mrs. F. Romine Taylor, Mrs. H. R. Thomas, Mrs. Meade B. Weaver and Mrs. Helen S. Wright.

Mrs. Broy, the former Miss Cecil Norton, will spend Christmas with her sister and brother-in-law, Capt. and Mrs. John Daniel O'Leary, at Quantico, Va. Mrs Broy's mother, Mrs. Jacob Anderson Norton, also will be a guest of the O'Learys.

It will be recalled that Mrs. Broy at one time was mentioned for the post of United States Ambassador to the Soviet Union.

Ex-Diplomat Publishes Book of Verse

Totten's Versatility Displayed; Poems Based On His Travels

A diplomat who writes memoirs isn't such a rarity, but one who can sit down and dash off a book of poems is news.

Therefore: Ralph Totten, former United States Minister to South Africa is news, for his volume, "Rhymes and Things," recently hoped for and hinted at came off the press yesterday.

The collection represents a number of half-minutes and half-hours salvaged from a long and busy career and as the introduction says, "have been written under all kinds of conditions, pleasant and unpleasant; on slow continental trains; while waiting in draughty stations; on rolling, coastwise steamers; by the blue Mediterranean; by Norwegian fjords, and in the shadow of the Alhambra.

Variety of Subjects

There are little love songs—those must have been written by the "blue Mediterranean"—and rousing good-fellow songs (possibly being lonely in a "draughty station" might have occasioned those).

Mr. Totten, who is one of the most modest men alive, in spite of the fact that he has shot more lions than almost anybody else would dare to shake a rifle at, says characteristically enough in his first quatrain:

"As my only excuse for these rhymes and things—
(You'll read them perhaps, or at least glance through)
When these verses I wrote on my wanderings,
I'd really not very much else to do."

Over the tea-cups last season, society was discovering that it had an artist right in its midst. It seemed that in his apartment, Mr. Totten (the same) turned out prints on his own press, and that when he wasn't doing etchings and drypoints, he was painting landscapes. One of the most popular pictures at an at home he gave last winter was a drawing he had made of his own studio, even down to the printing press, itself.

A little later, he put on a one-man show of his work . . . and all the time no one realized that he was getting ready to publish a book of poems.

Plans Two Other Books

Versatility is the word for Mr. Totten. He plans now to do a book on his hunting adventures, and after that, one on his experiences as a career man in Uncle Sam's foreign service.

He was born and went to school in Nashville, Tenn., and he still has that soft Southern accent when he talks. In 1908 he received his first appointment from President Theodore Roosevelt, and started off to see the world.

After that he served in positions of ever-increasing importance in the West Indies, South America, Europe and Africa. When 1930 rolled around, he was made Minister to South Africa. He held that post until his retirement last year, when he came to Washington to make his home.

There seems practically nothing else left for Mr. Totten to do—unless he decides to score a symphony. If he does, you can be pretty certain that it'll be a good one.

Mrs. Harlin Here To Visit Moores

Mrs. Maxey B. Harlin, jr., of Bowling Green, Ky., has arrived in Washington to visit her parents, former Representative and Mrs. John W. Moore, at the Highlands.

Mr. Harlin will join his wife here for Christmas. Before their marriage at Ellicott City, Md., in 1935, Mrs. Harlin was Miss Nancy Helm Moore.

Voteless Women Hear C. E. Lamson

Important Meetings Sponsored by League For This Week

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

An address yesterday by C. E. Lamson, director of the District of Columbia Employment Service, at a luncheon meeting of the Department of Government and Economic Welfare of the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters, inaugurated a series of important meetings the league is sponsoring this week. Three of them are scheduled today with a city-wide luncheon at 12:30 in the Y. W. C. A., under the sponsorship of the Department of Government and Child Welfare; a meeting of the Department of Government and Education at the home of Mrs. W. J. Couper, 108 Woodbine street, Chevy Chase, Md., at 3 p. m., and of the Department of Government and Foreign Policy, in the Foundry Methodist Church at 8 o'clock, with Miss Freda Utley, English journalist, as speaker.

Explains Setup

Mr. Lamson, who was introduced by Mrs. P. W. Chappell, chairman of the Department of Government and Economic Welfare, explained the setup of the employment service, which he said he hoped to make of value to the community as a meeting ground for employers and employes.

He went into detail as to the qualifications required of members of the staff and the training given to prepare them to examine applicants and determine their fitness for positions for which they were needed.

Another league group, that on the economic and legal status of women, met last night at the home of Mrs. Pearl B. Klein, 3000 Connecticut avenue, and was addressed by Mrs. Edwina A. Avery, on "Uniform Marriage and Divorce Laws." Mrs. Avery, an attorney, was selected to represent the women Federal Government employes in their work for the repeal of section 213 of the economy act.

Child Welfare Topic

The meeting today, devoted to child welfare, will be attended by more than 100 league members and representatives of other organizations concerned with the subject. Miss Katharine Lenroot, director of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor; Elwood Street, Miss Patricia Morse and Mrs. Gordon Wagenet will be among those on the program which will be in the form of a skit. This means of presenting the league work or the findings of its surveys in clever dramatizations has been used effectively by various departments of the organization this season.

Miss Utley, who speaks tonight, is also scheduled to address the Women's National Press Club at its 1 o'clock luncheon at the Willard, and will be entertained at tea by the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women this afternoon at the clubhouse, 1634 I street.

Has Traveled Widely

She is author of "Japan's Feet of Clay" and "Behind the Chinese Lines" and was for a time the Far Eastern correspondent of the Manchester Guardian. She has traveled widely not only in China, but also in Japan and Soviet Russia. She is in this country and Canada for a two months lecture tour. Her latest book is "Japan's Gamble in China."

Tonight her subject will be "Present Status of the Conflict in the Far East and the Relation of the United States and England to That Conflict."

Shadow Plays to Aid China

Parents Must Teach Sex, Mrs. Buckley Maintains

No Way to Keep Information From Children, Even if It Were Desirable, P.-T. A. Social Hygiene Head Thinks

By Christine Sadler.

If parents wish their children to have the correct attitudes concerning sex, they must assume the responsibility for teaching them, in the opinion of Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckley, chairman of the social hygiene committee of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers.

"We do not have to decide whether our children are to have the information. There is no way to keep it from them, even if that were desirable. The only thing parents have to decide is whether the home or the street is to be the classroom," she says.

The social hygiene committee of the P.-T. A. was revived this year after a lapse of several seasons. Mrs. Buckley and her workers are now conducting a survey in the various P.-T. A. units to determine whether parents wish the assistance such a committee might give them. In all units polled to date, the sentiment has been unanimous in favor of the proposed aid.

MRS. BUCKLEY

"We are not starting out with any thought of trying to get sex education courses into the school curriculum, but with the idea that it is the parent who needs the education first. A child absorbs his parents' attitudes just as easily as it does their manner of speech," Mrs. Buckley declares.

The P.-T.A. board was spurred in revival of the committee by such reports as that in "Youth Tell Their Story," in which a Nation-wide poll among young people showed they blame their parents for failing to tell them the proper sex facts. Mrs. Buckley points out that the boys and girls telling their story in this book are adolescent and that "when they are adolescent, it is too late to try to teach them."

"Many parents make that mistake, but the fact is that sex education should begin on the preschool level and continue as there is need for it. That is the second point our committee would like to stress. The first point we wish to drive home is that parents must come to realize that sex is not a problem, but just one of the aspects of normal living—and, as such, inevitable and right.

Correct Teaching Important to Child

"We know there is no instinct to guide children in approved sex conduct, for such conduct is the result of the long experience of society. It must be taught to children. If not taught correctly, its unsavory side will be tauught by the forces not so reticent nor subject to embarrassment as parents sometimes are," Mrs. Buckley asserts.

Mrs. Buckley is a native of Washington and entered P.-T. A. work at Shepherd School when her son was a pupil there. She is also a member of the committee on education of the Social Hygiene Society of Washington.

Phi Delta Gamma To Stage Dinner

The anniversary of the founding of the Alpha chapter of Phi Delta Gamma, national graduate fraternity, organized at the graduate school of American University, will be celebrated with a dinner party tomorrow night at 6 o'clock.

Honor guests will be Mrs. Margaret Sebree, national president of Phi Delta Gamma, and Mrs. Sally Crocker, local president, who are also members of Alpha chapter.

Pictures taken at the time of the founding of Beta Sigma Omicron Sorority, 50 years ago, were sent by the three founders to members of the Washington Alumnae Club to be shown at their anniversary banquet last night. The quaint photographs were passed around and enjoyed by the guests at the dinner which was held at Rixey Mansion, Arlington, Va.

The program included a review of the history of the sorority by Mrs. Robert Mason De Shazo. Mrs. Carl Giroux is president of the Washington group.

A new member, added to the club as a result of having seen the announcement on Sunday of the anniversary celebration, is Mrs. William P. Smith, an alumna of Ward Belmont College. She joined her sorority sisters in their attendance at the service in Old Christ Church, Alexandria, on Sunday and in their party last night. A newcomer to Washington, she had not known of the local sorority group before.

Others among the guests were Mrs. Charles Edwin Barton, Miss Pauline Berrum, Miss Peggy Buchanan, Mrs. Clarence A. Cannon, Mrs. Judson Cobb, Mrs. Robert Mason De Shazo, Mrs. Philip H. Groggins, Mrs. Robert H. Harmon, Mrs. James Norton Heaney, Miss Mary B. Kerr, Miss Gertrude Kinsley, Mrs. Henry A. Lyon, Miss Elizabeth L. Mann, Mrs. C. H. Shuey, Miss Veryl Schultz, Mrs. Donald S. Thompson, Miss Mattie Richards Tyler, Mrs. A. Y. Willis, jr.

Kappa Gammas Install Officers Of Epsilon Group

Epsilon Chapter of Kappa Gamma Sorority last night celebrated its first birthday with a banquet in the garden house of the Dodge Hotel. Installation of officers, headed by Mrs. Dorothy Dietrick, who is serving her second term, followed the dinner.

Other officers: Miss Laureta Curtin, vice president; Miss Mary Allen, second vice president; Miss Dorothy Newman, secretary; Miss Lucy Lickteig, recording secretary; Miss Lillian Irons, treasurer.

Officers were installed by Mrs. Helen McChesney, national president, who was one of the guests of honor. Others were Mrs. Joe Orr Davis, national secretary-treasurer, and Dr. Jesse W. Sprowls, instructor of phychology at the University of Maryland. Chapter presidents also were among guests. They included Miss Montana Zbinden, Alpha Chapter; Miss Mary Swartout, Beta; Mrs. Frances Hindman, Gamma; Miss Effie Lee Moore, Delta; Miss Sally Miller, Zeta; Mrs. Margaret Gordy George, Alpha Gamma, of Baltimore.

Beth Sholom League To Install Officers

The Young People's League of the Beth Sholom Synagogue will hold installation of officers at the synagogue at 8:30 o'clock tonight.

The new officers: President, Seymour Seleznow; vice president, Paul Shapiro; recording secretary, Freda Shapiro; corresponding secretary, Gertrude Burak; treasurer, Doris Zukoff, sergeant at arms, Max Leiderman; chaplain, Abe Landsman.

Rabbi Levinson and Sol Feldman, president of the congregation, will participate. Dancing and refreshments will follow.

Dr. Mann to Speak At Washington Clug

Dr. William Mann, director of the National Zoological Park, will speak at 11 o'clock this morning at the Washington Club, Seventeenth and K streets. He will talk on northern Europe and show motion pictures and colored slides he and his wife made on a trip last summer.

7 State Groups Plan Parties

Christmas parties and Governors' nights have the spotlight this week on calendars of the State societies. Tomorrow Gov. Lloyd Stark of Missouri and members of his staff will be entertained at the party given annually by the Missouri State Society in honor of officers of the armed services and their wives. It will be at the Shoreham Hotel at 9 p. m.

Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring and the Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. Malin Craig, the latter a native Missourian, will head the list of honor guests. Gov. Stark, a graduate of Annapolis, and several of his classmates will be included in the Navy list. Invitations also have been extended to Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of operations.

Three parties are scheduled for Thursday night. The New Jersey Society will give a chicken and spaghetti dinner at the Hay Loft, 1326 Massachusetts avenue, from 5 to 8, followed by a floor show and dancing; the Kentucky Society will have its annual Christmas party in the ballroom of the Willard, and the Massachusetts Society will have a dance at the Wardman Park.

Friday night the North Carolina Society will give its annual Governor's Night reception and dance, with Gov. and Mrs. Clyde R. Hoey as guests of honor. Former Govs. Cameron Morrison, O. Max Gardner and J. C. B. Ehringhaus have been invited. Gov. Albert L. Cox is chairman of arrangements and Wilber Jenkins is president of the society.

The California Society also is entertaining Friday, with a dance from 8:30 p. m. to 1 a. m. at 1500 Rhode Island avenue. There will be a Christmas tree and exchange of inexpensive gifts. Charles A. Marlowe is chairman of arrangements.

The West Virginia Society is the third entertaining Friday, giving its annual cider and gingerbread party at the Raleigh Hotel. Officers, headed by Col. H. H. Rice, president, will be installed.

Miss Dashiell Relates Old Christmas Legends

Miss Mary Ellen Dashiell, of the Washington Story League, illustrated the ancient art of story telling, presenting Christmas legends of many lands, last night at the meeting of the Pro Bonata Club.

Mrs. Lee D. Ritter was hostess at her home 5824 Fourth street. Mrs. Maurice Colbert and Mrs. Claude A. Webb provided Christmas music and toys were presented to Mrs. R. Alberts, philanthropic chairman, for distribution to children at Christmas. Mrs. J. Edwin Reid is pianist of the club.

Alexandria Police Hunt Cupid Trust

Marrying Parson Said To Be Leagued With D. C. Cab Drivers; Nuptials Illegal

Alexandria police last night were looking for a "marrying parson" from Elkton, Md., the Free State's erstwhile Gretna Green, who reportedly has set up in business in their midst and is marrying couples without a license, in violation of Virginia law.

The search followed reports that certain Washington taxicab drivers had taken couples, picked up in Washington, to Alexandria, under an arrangement with a "preacher" who paid them $2 per couple for the business.

If such a parson is operating in Alexandria, police said, he will be subject to severe penalties under the Virginia statute, since, in order to perform marriage ceremonies in the State, a pastor must obtain a license and be placed under a $500 bond.

Reports From Several Sources

Since reports of the taxicab-preacher partnership—a combination which made Elkton notorious—came from different sources, police were inclined to feel that one of the Elkton parsons may have heard that Alexandria offered opportunities as a marriage mart and started business there without the formality of complying with the law.

Any couples who may have been married by an unlicensed minister, police pointed out, are not legally married. Thus, if an Elkton parson is doing an "undercover" business in Alexandria, it was explained, the couples he has sent away are due for disillusionment.

Some Alexandria residents were showing concern yesterday over the prospect that Maryland's 48-hour "waiting period" law, which went into effect Thursday, would cause unemployed Elkton "marrying parsons" to migrate to Alexandria.

Clerk's Office Swamped

Marriage licenses were issued to 28 couples—a new all-time record so far as Alexandria is concerned, for Monday marriage license sales.

Even before the Clerk of the Court Elliott Hoffman arrived in the morning for work, would-be brides and bridegrooms were lined up in front of the courthouse and the newly-paying business of dispensing wedding permits was on the uptrend when he closed his office doors at 4:15 p. m. There were rumors that 'steps soon would be taken to send the trade elsewhere—although it would take a special act of the Virginia Legislature.

Most Seek Civil Rites

Yesterday's influx of "get married quick" couples set Hoffman's office clerks a dizzy pace. Hardly did the door close behind one set of marriage applicants when another appeared.

But in spite of the rush, authorities reported that Elkton's "marrying parsons" had made no official attempt to take up their "stand" in Alexandria. No applications for licenses to perform weddings had been filed.

In most cases yesterday, marriage license applicants requested civil ceremonies. Alexandria has only one justice of the peace eligible to perform marriages, Herman Friendlander, whose office is a half block from the courthouse. If couples expressed preference for religious ceremonies, they were directed to a resident minister.

Ruffner Can Do Nothing

Said Mayor Richard L. Ruffner:

"There is nothing we can do about it—as much as we might like to. It is not a local situation—the State is responsible. We'll just have to take it and like it, I guess."

Mayor Ruffner said, however, he had received many complaints from both citizens and the clergy.

"They are dead against this wholesale marriage proposition, but I am powerless to act," he said.

Winchester Feels Rush

The Episcopal faith is the only one in Alexandria which requires filing of marriage intentions. Notice of three days must be given if an Episcopalian ceremony is desired, it was pointed out.

Hoffman said yesterday's sale of marriage licenses—at $3.50 each—exceeded by "more than 20" the usual day's output. States represented included New York, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Florida and Maryland.

Convinced that the rush soon will abate, Hoffman said he doesn't intend to order any additional license blanks or add to his office staff.

A portion of the "quick marriage" trade also has gone to Winchester, Va., according to Associated Press reports last night. Of 21 licenses issued there yesterday, all but four were granted to non-residents.

Christmas Shoppers Exhaust Dog Supply At the Pound, but More Are on the Way

These Scotties are among the better unclaimed dogs at the District pound which are going fast as Christmas gifts at $2 each

The Yuletide rush is on at the District Pound and you will have to act soon if you want to get a nice pooch for Christmas. More customers than dogs are coming in, Poundmaster Frank B. Marks said yesterday.

The supply of puppies is already exhausted, but more will be arriving and an early riser can get one for $2 and the promise of a good home.

Two cute Scotties, a wire-haired terrier, and a good many "whadayacallits" were still for sale yesterday. There is one peculiar looking young fellow with long, flaming red hair and a devilish gleam in his eye. He looks as though he came from Mars and he's anybody's for $2.

Segregated in a special cell at the Pound is Skippy. A month ago he was sentenced to death by Judge Edward Curran of Police Court after neighbors testified that the dog, owned by Evart R. Rice, 3977 First street southwest, had snapped at and bitten them.

But Judge Curran granted a reprieve after veterinarians reported that the dog did not appear harmful. Today Skippy goes before Judge Curran for a retrial.

Peggy Townsend, Debutante, Stars As Blues Singer

Washington society was well represented at a gathering of 200 persons that crowded into the Club Caprice at the Powhatan Hotel last night to hear Peggy Townsend, debutante niece of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, make her debut as a blues singer.

Although her first appearance in public, Miss Townsend literally "brought down the house" with such songs as "Two Sleepy People" and "Have You Forgotten So Soon," which she sang with Lee Sullivan.

The singing debutante, who has, in the opinion of her friends, a bright future, sang like a veteran performer, showing no sign of nervousness. She will sing at the club twice each night and at the cocktail hour on Saturday.

Boys Leave Home To 'Care for Selves'

Three adventurous brothers, Markin and Herbert Martin, 14-year-old twins, and William, 13, left their home at 338 Adams street northeast yesterday to "find a place where they could take care of themselves," according to their father, Mark Martin.

Martin told police he returned from work yesterday and found a note signed by the three boys, telling all about their plans except where they were going.

He said they took with them most of their spare clothing, a quantity of canned goods, and about $5 in cash.

G. W. Student Lawyers Hear Judge Luhring

Aspiring Barristers Given Explanation of New Procedure Rules

Meeting last night for the first time since their organization was formed, 200 members of the Student Bar Association of George Washington University heard Judge Oscar R. Luring of the District Court describe Federal rules of civil procedure.

Commenting on the new liberal rules eliminating many of the objections to the old common law practices, Judge Luhring said, "trickery in law is a thing of the past. A man now has the right to be tried on the merits of his case."

Judge Luhring traced the history of the split between law and equity, pointing out that until this year the District was a common law jurisdiction. Maryland and Virginia, he said are "two of the few States that still separate law and equity."

As parting advice to the prospective lawyers, the Judge said, "there is no money in the practice of criminal law. Get into the civil side."

U. S. Seeks to Bar Medical Society Hearing Today

Justice Proctor will hear today the Government's claim that the District Medical Society—a prospective defendant—has no right before its indictment to come into court with legal objections to prosecution.

The society's motion asks that the grand jury investigating monopoly charges against District and American Medical Associations be told that practicing medicine is not a trade, and hence is not subject to the Sherman antitrust act, thus the act could not have been violated in the campaign against Group Health Association, Inc.

The Department of Justice, it was understood, will object that until the grand jury reports there is no case pending to which the society is a party. Should the court rule on the motion, the department will claim that "trade," as specified in the Sherman act, covers every work at which men earn their livelihood.

Pine Asks Delay In Quantrille Case

District Attorney Pine yesterday asked the United States Court of Appeals to reserve judgment on a motion for a new trial for Carman G. Quantrille, now serving a 5 to 25 year jail sentence for a safe robbery, pending further investigation of a confession to the crime signed Saturday by two other men.

Quantrille and Henry T. Milton were convicted in District Court last June of stealing the strongbox, which contained $1,000, from the Washington Beef & Provision Co., 1110 E street southwest.

Board Hits Cost of Bus For 'Cripples'

'Outrageous Expense' In Transporting Some Pupils to School Is Laid to Lax Parents

Parents of physically handicapped children who refuse to cooperate with school authorities in transportation of the youngsters to and from schools were charged last night by members of the Board of Education's advisory committee with causing an "outrageous and unfair expenditure of public money."

The committee failed to make any recommendation as a group, but individual members, commenting on a report by A. W. Heinmiller, schools procurement officer in charge of transportation, asserted "too many parents seem to be taking the line of least resistance and letting the public foot transportation bills they themselves should assume."

"Parents should have to prove they are unable to provide transportation for the children," Mrs. Lenore W. Smith, member of the Board of Education, said. "It appears that several children who are in real need of the free transportation cannot get it because parents who can afford to provide transportation refuse to co-operate but demand special services which exhaust available funds and necessitate leaving children off the routes each year."

$27,000 Is Needed

Heinmiller's report stated that $27,000 is needed by the schools to provide transportation for all the handicapped children whose applications have been certified by the District Health Department. Obstacles to the solution of the transportation problem have been presented by constantly changing routes in the District and by special demands for service for crippled children.

Cost of transportation is pushed up, he said, because crippled children have to be picked up at the doors of their homes, certain parents failing to co-operate in carrying the youngsters to central pickup spots. "It is not unreasonable to expect parents to bring children to central points, but few are willing to do it and for some it is impossible," he said.

Heinmiller explained that children eliminated from routes this year were those for whom expense of transportation amounted to more than $1 per day. He said about three dozen children with impaired sight were the heaviest sufferers. The 12 crippled children left off the routes are cared for under the new WPA visiting teachers project, while the other children are getting to school as best they can.

Spending Held Unfair

He recalled that the $20,000 transportation appropriation for handicapped children for the current year is $5,000 below the figures sought and said if applications are to be met next year, $27,000 will be required.

"That is an outrageous and unfair expenditure of public money." Miss Jessie LaSalle, in charge of educational research of District schools, said. "This transportation problem would not occur year after year if there were not so many special demands to be met."

Committee members also heard a report from Charles W. Pimper, on activity of the Kiwanis Club in Care of the District's crippled children. He paid special tribute to Washington physicians "for their willingness to aid in this work."

Sub-committees were appointed by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education and chairman of the advisory committee, to study first-hand the needs of handicapped children. Members will visit schools for handicapped children after Christmas in Baltimore and Washington. Sub-committees and personnel were:

Crippled children and cardiac cases, Charles W. Pimper, chairman; Bruce Baird, Miss Gertrude H. Bowling, Dr. Harry A. Ong, Robert L. Haycock, A. K. Savoy.

Police and Businessmen Lead Colorful Procession; Community Tree Dedicated; Anacostia Jobs Daughters Win Prize

A colorful parade arranged by the Southeast Business Men's Association last night opened the Southeast Christmas Lane on Pennsylvania avenue and Eighth street southeast. Police estimated more than 5,000 persons lined the parade route.

Led by police officials and businessmen, a procession of bands and floats marched over the entire course of the Christmas lane, from Eighth and I streets southeast, north to Pennsylvania avenue, west to Sixth street, and back past the reviewing stand to the starting point.

Following the parade, officials of the committee who arranged the celebration dedicated a community Christmas tree at Eighth street and Pennsylvania.

Among those who joined in the ceremony were Mrs. Mae F. Brinkley, general chairman of the Christmas committee; Arthur J. Shaffer and Adelbert W. Lee, vice presidents of the association; Louis F. Frick, secretary; Alex Berlin, treasurer; Pierce C. McGrath, sergeant at arms; O. W. Rickard and Joe Millazzo, members of the committee, and Capt. Joseph C. Morgan of the Fifth Precinct.

Around this tree, on Christmas Eve, police of the Fifth Precinct plan to make their annual distribution of food baskets to underprivileged families. Last year they gave away 4,080 of these baskets, along with quantities of clothing shortly after the New Year.

Prize winning units in the parade were the Anacostia Lodge No. 5 of Jobs Daughters, who will be awarded a cup as the best marchers; the Chevy Chase-Chestnut Farms Dairy Employes' Band, and the float entered by the Rock Creek Ginger Ale Co.

Other groups who took part in the parade were the Holy Comforter Boys Band, Robert Le Bruce Patrol of the Order of DeMolay, Woodmen of the World, the Redmen, Boy Scouts, Friendship House, and several business firms. Parade judges were Louis A. Frick, Adelbert W. Lee and Robert Hanson.

Father of 3 Fined $10 for 12-Cent Theft of Food

For stealing a 12-cent can of baking powder to make bread for his three children, Edward Hall, colored, 40, 1300 block Ninth street northwest, was sentenced to pay a $10 fine or serve 10 days in jail yesterday by Police Court Judge John P. McMahon.

Hall, a WPA laborer, admitted yesterday that he took the 6-ounce can of powder "because that was the only ingredient he did not have for bread." He told the court he had other food, but no bread and that he did not get paid until Thursday.

Cleveland Park Businessmen's Association, at a meeting last night, made final arrangements for its emblem design contest, the winning design to become the official insignia of the organization. Hundreds of designs have already been entered in the contest, for which there is a $25 prize.

Citizens Call On U.S. to Pay 'Debt' to D.C.

Kalorama Association Declares Federal Contribution Would Obviate New Taxes

The Kalorama Citizens Association last night called on the Federal Government to pay "what it owes the District" as a solution to Washington's tax problem. Two civic organizations attacked the proposed chain store tax, and one opposed any sales tax for the District.

It was charged at the Kalorama meeting that Congress in 1926 voted to meet 40 per cent of District costs, and that the act was not repealed until 1937. In this period, however, it was contended, the Federal Government contributed only a lump sum of money, instead of the percentage provided in the legislation.

The difference between what the Federal Government actually paid and what it had promised to pay during that period would be enough to make such levies as proposed sales and—income taxes unnecessary for many years, the group's resolution declared.

The unit also held a party celebrating the birthday of its president, Mrs. Edna L. Johnston.

Staunton Park Citizens

A resolution asking that present laws requiring annual physical examinations of barbers and beauticians be extended to cover restaurant employes, meat and food handlers, was indorsed by the Staunton Park Citizens Association.

The association renewed its opposition to the proposed chain store tax bill, following talks by W. E. Cartwright, of the Sanitary Grocery Co., and Harry Stull, vice president of the Federation, who attacked the bill as a "punitive" measure.

A resolution favoring removal of five frame houses in 200 block of Third street northeast, was indorsed. Walter E. Reedy, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Marks, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Chalkley, and Mrs. Ada H. Coe, were elected members.

Parkview

B. J. Kroger was re-elected president. Other officers elected are George E. Frech, vice president; John S. Cole, secretary; H. H. Moore, treasurer; R. E. Safron, Mrs. Charles Balziel, and H. B. Smallwood, executive committee; Fred S. Walker, and F. E. Smith, delegates to the federation.

West End

Two suggestions for solution of traffic problems were made by the West End Citizens Association: that automobiles should go to the right of loading zones and raised platforms, and that beginning June 1 parking on all streets be limited to 12 hours.

The group proposed that delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations be limited to one vote each.

Hillcrest

Hillcrest Citizens Association arranged plans for a community sing and Christmas tree party December 22 at Alabama and Branch avenues southeast.

The unit asked for extension of bus service into Anacostia; extension of Thirteenth street to Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and enlargement of Randle Highlands School. It joined the American Congress for Peace and Democracy.

S. E. Crucial Meets

First Italian Baptist Minister Ordained Here Receives Charge at Altar of Father's Church

Principals in ordination ceremony last night at Italian Baptist Church were Olindo Marseglia (left), the candidate; the Rev. M. C. Marseglia, pastor of the church and candidate's father; the Rev. F. W. Johnson, ordination council moderator; the Rev. C. B. Austin, ordination council clerk, and the Rev. W. S. Abernethy, Calvary Baptist pastor and speaker.

As admiring friends and relatives looked on, Olindo Marseglia last night became the first Italian to be ordained to the Baptist ministry in Washington.

Kneeling before the altar of the Chiesa del Redentore, New York avenue and Kirby streets northwest, where his father, the Rev. M. C. Marseglia, has served for many years, the candidate was "charged" by the Rev. Clarence R. Ferguson, pastor of the Wisconsin Avenue Baptist Church, to "preach the word of God."

Earlier in the service, he listened as Dr. William S. Abernethy, of Calvary Baptist Church, who gave the ordination sermon and prayer, advised that "preaching, particularly these days, is a serious business."

Later, he heard the consecration hymn rendered by Miss Betty Torcasio, who was accompanied on the organ by his son, Orlando; received the "hand of fellowship" from the Rev. Charles B. Austin, clerk of the Ordination Council and moderator of the D. C. Baptist Convention, and was presented with two Bibles by his father on behalf of the congregation. One was printed in English, the other in Italian.

Relatives of the candidate present, in addition to his parents, were his wife and daughter, Elizabeth; three sons, Orlando, Everard and Eugene; three sisters, Mrs. Olga Gallihorn and the Misses Adele and Abbie Marseglia.

The Rev. F. W. Johnson, Moderator of the Ordination Council of the D. C. Baptist Convention, presided at the service, in which other participating clerics were the Rev. A. Lincoln Smith, assistant pastor, National Baptist Memorial Church, and the Rev. M. P. German, Bethany Baptist.

The ordination marked the realization of a hope of Mrs. D. W. Faunce, mother of the late president of Brown University. In 1903, when Mr. Marseglia, then a lad of 13 years, was attending the First Baptist Church of that city, Mrs. Faunce presented him with a Bible, bearing an inscription of her desire that some day he become a minister.

Lou Gevinson Wins Decision Over Pete Galiano

Sports | The Washington Post | Sports

18 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

The ten National Football League coaches will announce the official All-Pro team of 1938 tomorrow . . . Wanna bet that there is a Redskin on it? Buck Newsom, the only American League pitcher, with the exception of Red Ruffing, to win 20 games in 1938, graced Washington with his presence yesterday . . . Newsom is en route to New York to talk 1939 terms with the Browns' owners . . . and will be the highest paid pitcher in the league if the Browns sign him at his own figure, which is $22,500. . . . Newsom's feat of winning 20 games with the Browns was the stand-out pitching performance of the year.

POVICH.

Professional football must explain how an assistant coaching job at Washington and Lee University can lure away an established pro star such as Riley Smith.

Mr. Frank E. O'Neill wants to know how a certain player in the Redskin line could play an entire quarter against the Giants in the mud without getting his uniform dirty . . . Money that has showed for Carnegie Tech against Texas Christian U. in the Sugar Bowl has forced the odds on Carnegie down from 2 to 1, to 9 to 5 . . . And Oklahoma betters are snapping up the 2 to 1 being offered on the New Year's game with Tennessee . . . the 9 to 5 odds on Duke against Southern California in the Rose Bowl will lengthen shortly unless Duke money begins to show.

O. U. Busher!

If baseball managers at the New York meeting are up to their old tricks, bell boys are scurrying through the lobbies loudly paging "O. U. Busher." . . . The six-player Cubs-Giants swap had its inception in a taxi-cab last summer when Gabby Hartnett and Bill Terry rode downtown together from Wrigley Field . . . Terry broached a trade that would bring Ken O'Dea to the Giants in exchange for Hank Leiber and the deal burgeoned into a swap of six players . . . One report has it that the Cleveland Indians held up the transfer of Zeke Bonura to the National League until Clark Griffith agreed to cast his vote for night baseball in the American League next season.

Deer has been so plentiful in Michigan this season that the State has given 350 head to the George Washington Forest for liberation in Virginia . . . Hounds crossed with airedales make the best bear dogs, according to veteran Blue Ridge Mountain hunters . . . who prefer the hounds for scent and the airedales for fighting qualities . . . The shepherd dog, fiercest of the canine breed, is n.g. as a bear dog because of its lack of scent . . . But English bulldogs crossed with hounds have proven excellent bear dogs . . . Should a second party of hunters kill a bear treed by dogs of another party, the code is that the hide belongs to the dogs' owners and the carcass to the killers.

Remember Jeffri

Lou Nova, the latest heavyweight sensation who is due to take on Tommy Farr, has been cautioned by Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey to bide his time and not rush into big-time battles . . . But Jim Jeffries won the heavyweight championship of the world in his eleventh professional fight . . . Mike Jacobs has bought out the interests of three New York sports writers in the Twentieth Century Club, and is now 100 per cent owner of the promotional enterprise . . . Jack Dempsey was awarded the Neil Medal for having contributed the most to boxing during 1938 . . . But his contributions are rather vague in the memory of this corner . . . Henry Armstrong was the stand-out boxing figure of the year.

The dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia robbed that country of its world champion table tennis players . . . Manufacturers of ping pong sets are enjoying a boom much like the midget golf bubble, but there is evidence that it will be more lasting . . . the U. S. Government's regulation of trade practices has cut most of the golf pros off the pay rolls of the golf equipment manufacturers . . . The first golf balls were made of tightly compressed feathers encased in hard rubber . . . Solid wooden balls later became the vogue . . . The Royal and Ancient Golf Society, ruling body of the game in England, still refuses to approve the 14-club limit placed on American golfers.

O'Brien Shuns Pros

After their performance against the Giants, a half dozen of the Redskins ought to go to Owner George Marshall and demand a salary cut . . . Davey O'Brien will shun pro football and take a job with a Texas oil concern . . . Marshall Goldberg's kid brother is among the Pitt freshmen who will be ousted from college unless they find jobs that will net them their tuition next season . . . The Redskins failed two years ago to exercise an option on Hank Soar, the hard-running Giant back . . . Tuffy Leemans and Mel Hein are the highest-paid members of the Giants' squad.

The Zeke Bonura deal saved Clark Griffith the headache of talking contract with Bonura who last year drew $14,000 and faced a drastic cut . . . The higest paid member of the Nats in 1939 will be Buddy Myer, who staged a brilliant comeback last season . . . Bobby Estallela is not being permitted to play baseball in Cuba this winter by the Nats' owner who envisions him as a regular member of the Washington outfield . . . Johnny Stone, ill since last June when he quit the Nats for treatment, is rapidly on the mend and hopes to rejoin the club. Griffith swung a trade before leaving for New York . . . He traded several thousand square feet of land to Howard University for an equal amount of territory behind the Griffith Stadium stands!

Tea Honors Women's Golf Association Outgoing Officers

Officers Who Aided Her Regime Also in Receiving Line at Army, Navy Club

Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, Congressional, who retired after three years as president of the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association, and the officers who served with her, performed their last official duty yesterday at Army and Navy, in the receiving line of a tea given by the members of the association, on a recommendation of the Beaver Dam committee.

Mrs. Payne, who will serve as a member of the executive committee, as retiring president; Mrs. Roy C. Miller, Kenwood, vice president; Mrs. T. J. Johnson, Army and Navy, secretary, and Mrs. Theodore Peyser, Woodmont, treasurer, were in the receiving line. Mrs. James W. Beller, Chevy Chase, second vice president, was unable to attend the event.

More than 100 members of the local women's golf group attended the first affair of its kind honoring an outgoing president and her committee, who were urged to serve another term by the nominating committee, but refused.

Mrs. L. E. Harris, chairman of the Woodmont women's golf committee, served as chairman of the tea, assisted by the golf chairmen of every member of the association, including Mrs. F. E. Gygax, of the host club; Mrs. Ed Widmayer, Argyle; Mrs. H. M. Brundage, Columbia; Mrs. J. H. Bullock, Indian Spring; Mrs. Charles T. Penn, Congressional; Mrs. H. H. Hughes, Kenwood; Mrs. H. L. Simcoe, Manor; Mrs. L. D. Platt, Chevy Chase; Mrs. C. E. McGowan, Beaver Dam, and Mrs. G. C. Roney, Washington.

The 1939 executive body attended the highly successful event, including Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, Columbia, president; Mrs. Gale E. Pugh, Manor, first vice president; Mrs. G. C. Roney, Washington, second vice president; Mrs. J. H. Bullock, Indian Spring, secretary, and Mrs. Peyser, who will serve a fourth term in the important position of treasurer.

Maryland Honors Its Football Team

Twenty-Three Gridders, Seven Harriers Given Letters; Team's Spirit Praised by Regent Holzapfel, President Byrd and Coach Dobson

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Maryland University's 1938 football team, the poorest from a record standpoint in Frank Dobson's four years as head coach, was feted at the annual grid banquet last night at Beaver Dam Country Club, by the largest crowd in Dobson's tenure. About 200 attended.

Twent-four members of the varsity squad, including Manager George Knepley, received major M's and gold footballs for the six senior members of the squad were also presented. Director of Athletics Geary Eppley rewarded the seven members of his cross-country team that finished second in the recent Southern Conference meet.

Prof. Charles S. Richardson, former member of the athletic board, who has attended every Maryland grid banquet since the first one in 1909, was toastmaster, while the speakers included President H. C. Byrd, Henry Holzapfel, '93, member of the board of regents; Gus Welch, former Carlisle quarterback, who related a few of his famed football stories, and Dobson, Faber and Eppley, who presented the letters.

Arthur "Dutch" Bergman, Catholic University head coach; Charlie Havens, grid mentor at Western Maryland; H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of athletics at Georgetown University, attended the meeting in addition to local high and prep school coaches and prominent Maryland alumni, many of whom were introduced for their grid feats by President Byrd, former player and coach. The school head also lauded George Lawrence and Bob Smith of the '38 team.

ENDS—Frank Dwyer, Frank Blazek, Francis Beamer and Leo Mueller.

Manager—George Knepley.

Clovers Win By 44 to 24

Young Democrats Are Losers; United Clay Takes Battle

With the help of Big Bill Noonan, former George Washington star, the Clovers knocked off the Young Democrats, of southern Maryland, 44 to 24, in the Southeast Community Center Basketball League at Hine Junior High last night.

Giants Reported Set To Play in Chicago

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—The Chicago Tribune announced tonight the New York Giants, newly crowned professional football champions, had accepted an invitation to play in the sixth annual pro-college all-stars game here next August.

The game, originated and sponsored by the Tribune, is played annually between the pro title-holder and a group of senior stars from colleges throughout the country.

Hoya Cage Quint to Play G.W. March 8

Game Will Mark Renewal of Athletic Relations Between The 2 Universities

A wholly unexpected attraction was added to the District's winter sports program last night when athletic officials of George Washington and Georgetown Universities announced the scheduling of a basketball game between the schools March 8 at Tech High School.

Thus, the long awaited and eagerly anticipated renewal of athletic relations between the schools will be consumated seven months sooner than expected. The Colonials and Hoyas meet in football next November, inaugurating a full calendar of sports that will see them clash in baseball and several intramural sports as well as those of major proportions.

This year's basketball game will be in the nature of a post-season contest, for both quintets close their regular campaigns the previous week. With Bill Reinhardt piloting the downtown school to new heights on the court, and Elmer Ripley—the man who produced some of Georgetown's greatest teams, back at the helm—it should be a topnotch attraction and attract many times more fans than Tech's limited seating capacity will accommodate.

It may decide the mythical collegiate championship of the District, inasmuch as both teams engage Maryland, which in turn, plays Catholic University. At this early date both Georgetown and George Washington figure to be too strong for the Terrapins, but that merely is conjectural.

Simultaneously with the announcement of the varsity game it was disclosed that two games have been booked between the freshman teams, the first January 9, and the second February 9, both at Tech. They will be preliminary games to Georgetown and George Washington varsity games. The Hoyas meet Temple on the January date, while George Washington's opponent will be Washington and Jefferson.

Hoyas to Meet Loyola Tonight

What in former years was a tune-up game may turn out to be a difficult hurdle for the Georgetown U. basketeers when they meet a veteran quintet from Loyola College of Baltimore, Md., at Tech gymnasium tonight at 8:30.

The Greyhounds have never defeated a Hoya five since the two Jesuit schools have met on the court, but this year, after a convincing victory over Catholic University and a defeat to Villanova by a slim margin, they are ready to do their best to break the precedent.

Coach Elmer Ripley speeded up the pace in the practice sessions. He aims to polish up the Hoya defense so that it will be in keeping with all of his teams which were known for holding the opposition to very conservative scores.

Bonura to Sign Giants' Contract At $15,000 Salary

New Orleans, Dec. 12 (AP).—Zeke Bonura said tonight he and Bill Terry, manager of the New York Giants, had agreed by telephone that he would get $15,000 as the Giants' first baseman next year.

"Bill asked me how much I wanted," Bonura said, "and when I told him 15 grand he said, 'Okay, the contract will be mailed immediately. Just sign it and return it.'"

The salary agreement came about 24 hours after announcement that the Giants had obtained Bonura from Washington in exchange for two rookies and about $20,000 cash.

Action in Gevinson Battle

Knockdown In Seventh Helps Lou

Baltimorean Shows Punching Ability in Battle Here; Alzek Wins From Taylor

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Puffing like a porpoise, but pounding his opponent's perspiration-drenched frame with the unrelenting persistence of a grandfather's clock, Lou Gevinson last night scored a smashing eight-round victory over Pete Galiano, of Baltimore, in a triumphant comeback at Turner's Arena.

Fairly oozing with determination and whipping over his left hook with all of its old-time vigor, Gevinson piled up an early lead, climaxed by a knockdown in the seventh round, to survive Galiano's last-round flourish that all but earned him a draw. On the official score-sheet each man won three rounds, and two were even.

A bridegroom of nine hours, Galiano went down to defeat with his bride occupying a ringside seat near his corner, but not before manufacturing a battle that ranked with the stirring Everett-Boyd duel of the previous week. Galiano made the fight by his willingness to walk in and slug with Gevinson, and at the final bell was the fresher of the two and beginning to carry the fight.

Galiano Knocked Down

Pete, scaling 140¼ pounds to Gevinson's 138½, sealed his fate by neglecting to avoid a whistling left hook authored by the District boy in the final seconds of the seventh round. He undoubtedly could have regained his feet before Referee Reynolds reached 10, but would have been a woefully easy target for Gevinson, who was eager for the kill.

Galiano looked great in the previous round, chopping into Gevinson's slim lead with a series of rights to the head that staggered Lou and threatened to put him on the canvas. And until Gevinson sent the left banging into his unprotected jaw in the seventh, Galiano was holding his own.

Gevinson served notice of his serious intentions as early as the second round when he stung Galiano with a left high on the head and then staggered him with a right to the jaw. Galiano's knees wobbled precariously, but he fought back gamely and was slugging it out at the bell.

Gevinson staggered his foe with another left to the head midway in the third, but quickly retreated when Galiano retaliated with a savage body attack and was content to cover and paw throughout the remainder of the session. Galiano improved in the fourth and Gevinson began to lose ground until he landed a palpably low blow which the referee and judges missed. It slowed Pete down to a walk and cost him the round which was voted even.

Gevinson Appears Winded

Lou won the fifth, pumping Crunching left hooks to the body and setting up the target with long rights to the head, but the round saw him weaken, and saw him begin to blow heavily at the nostrils. And in the sixth it was Galiano, smashing a series of rights to the head, working in close and driving both hands to the body, who held the advantage. He dazed Gevinson and had him hanging on at the bell.

Apparently fully aware of the fact that his lone chance of winning hinged on a knockout, Galiano emerged from his corner determined to put Gevinson away as the eighth and final round opened. He crowded the Southwest southpaw into a neutral corner and banged four rights to the head without a return. Gevinson was tired and content to remain on the defense and coast in, but Galiano crowded him into the ropes again and punched him halfway through the strands with more two-fisted punching to the mid-section.

Gevinson's knees buckled as Galiano blasted him with a right to the head, but he clinched and held, and worked his way out of trouble—and kept out of range until the bell.

Eddie Alzek (138¼), substituting for ailing Johnny Dube, dumped Bucky Taylor (139¼), of Baltimore, twice in the first round and survived a knockdown himself in the sixth to win a unanimous eight-round decision in the semifinal.

Sixto Escobar Signed For Bout Here Monday

Bantamweight Champion Will Meet Mancini, Leading New England Scrapper, in Nontitle Fight at Arena

Sixto Escobar, luggage-tan world bantamweight champion from Puerto Rica, last night agreed to meet Al Mancini, outstanding New England featherweight, in a 10-round feature bout at Turner's Arena Monday night. It necessarily will be an over-the-weight match, Mancini agreeing to make 124 pounds.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who finally clinched the match after eight weeks of negotiating and counternegotiating, exuberantly announced the swarthy little leatherpusher will defend his championship against an opponent to be selected at Griffith Stadium next summer.

ESCOBAR

The doll-size islander, is considered one of the most colorful pugilists working at the trade, but has been idle for a long time because of the scarcity of good bantams. He gave Harry Jeffra, of Baltimore, such a severe whipping in regaining the title from him last year Jeffra never was the same. He holds two victories over Joey

Coalmen Gain First Place; Hot Shoppes, Dapper Dan Win

In one of the wildest and most furiously fought basketball games ever featured on a local floor Delaware and Hudson's tossers rushed from behind to upset Federal Bureau of Investigation's five before 300 wild-eyed spectators in Heurich gymnasium last night, 27 to 26.

In scoring over F. B. I. after a great uphill fight the Coalmen gained undisputed possession of the leadership in first half Heurich Amateur Basketball League play.

Dashing Don Fones, former Central High School star, provided the spark that enabled Delaware and Hudson to register when he sank two consecutive field goals in the fading minutes to send the Coalmen into a 27 to 25 command, after which Jones converted his foul shot.

In preliminary games Hot Shoppes won over St. Martin's, 42 to 35, and Dapper Dan routed PWA, 44 to 17.

Dobie Not Seeking Contract Renewal At Boston College

Newton, Mass., Dec. 12 (AP).—"Gloomy" Gil Dobie, taciturn man of the gridiron for more than a quarter of a century, tonight ended all conjecture as to whether he would be dropped as Boston College football coach by announcing he wawsn't seeking the job again.

Dobie's three-year contract, which reputedly paid him $10,000 annually, expires next April, and reports that it would not be renewed have been current almost since the beginning of the 1938 season.

The Rev. Patrick H. Collins, S. J., faculty director of athletics, made public Dobie's one-sentence letter, which read:

Maryland Honors Its Football Team at Annual Gridiron Banquet

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Stars in Eclipse

New York, Dec. 12.—For a while no one spoke as the car pulled away from the Polo Grounds. The driver was too busy trying to dodge the traffic and the passengers seemed too busy with their thoughts about the game they had just witnessed. Finally, as the road stretched out straight ahead, one of the passengers spoke.

VIDMER.

"The only trouble with the Giants," he said, "is that they lack color. Why don't they get some players with big names?"

"Big names? What do you mean by that?" another asked. "Don't you call such names as Mel Hein, Tuffy Leemans, Ward Cuff, Leland Shaffer and all the rest big names?"

"Well, yes. But they're just big in professional football. I mean big college names. I noticed in the draft selections the other day that the Cardinals' first choice was Ki Aldrich, of T. C. U.; the Pirates' was Sid Luckman; the Philadelphia Eagles took Davey O'Brien; Brooklyn took McLeod, of Dartmouth; the Redskins grabbed Hale, the T. C. U. tackle. All those fellows are big names in college football. Most of them were selected on various All-American teams. But who did the Giants choose first—a fellow named Neilson, from Arizona. Ever hear of him?"

"No," he said, "but I probably will. If the Giants figured he was the best man in the country for them, then he must be good. Look at some of the fellows who were out there today. You probably never heard of Cuff, either, when he was at Marquette, or Hank Soar when he was at Providence, or Dale Burnett when he was at Emporia Teachers. But you hear of them now, and you've been hearing of them all season."

Permanent Patronage

"Sure, but what I'm trying to get at is why the Giants don't pick some of these fellows who have big names in college, like Whizzer White last year and Luckman this year. Those are the fellows the crowd turns out to see."

"Oh, it was big and plenty excited and enthusiastic, but they came to see the Giants and the Packers—two fine football teams—not to see some individual stars whom they had followed in college."

Well, maybe the answer is in the outcome of the game. The Giants probably figure that the crowd will keep coming if the team keeps winning, and they figure to keep winning as long as they get the best players, regardless of college reputations. The crowd may turn out to see a big name player once or twice, but if he keeps playing on the losing side they soon forget that he is a big name, or was. I doubt if you can tell me with what colleges such men were identified this season as Willis, Ginney, Woddell, Zager, Mills, Roberts, Schroeder, Aills and Panish."

"Willis was a tackle at Clemson, Ginney a guard at Santa Clara, Woddell a center at Arkansas, Zager a tackle at Stanford, Mills a tackle at Nebraska, Roberts a tackle at DePaul, Schroeder an end at Texas Aggies, Aills a back at Centenary, and Panish a halfback at Bradley."

"So what?"

Firm Foundation

"Well, those fellows were among the first men the Giants selected while the others were picking better-known figures like Beinor, of Notre Dame; Wysocki, of Villanova; Goldberg, of Pitt; Roth, of Cornell; Bottari, of California, and the like. But the chances are the names of the Giants' men will be familiar to you long after you have forgotten the others.

"They may not have played with prominent teams during their undergraduate careers, but they will be playing with a prominent team from now on—championship teams are always prominent. The Giants are champions now and they expect to keep on being champions by forgetting about college reputations and taking the men they think will help them most, regardless of publicity value."

That seemed to me a pretty fair explanation of the Giants' success in the National Football League. They were Eastern champions in 1933, national champions in 1934, Eastern champions in 1935 and again in 1936, and now they're national champions again. That isn't a bad record.

It may be that the fans would like to see some of the campus celebrities cavorting in the Giants' backfield or milling around in the line. But the fans seem to like to see a consistent winner just as well, whether there are any All-American performers on the field or not. And the Giants have given them consistent winners.

That was a powerful, fast and well-drilled team that Steve Owen sent against the Packers from Green Bay on Sunday. It won because it got the jump on the Western champions, scoring 9 points in the first quarter before Green Bay seemed to realize that the football game had started.

The Packers came back and landed blow for blow from there on. They played like the fine team that they have been all season. They even managed to catch up and pass the Giants, leading at one point in the third period by 17 to 16 in as frantic, furious and fantastic a game as the season has produced, but the Giants still had something left—enough, at least, to score again, and that's all the scoring there was.

Ed Connick Has 147-379 To Top Loop

Substation Bowlers Lose to Transit; Progressive Printing Increases Its Lead

Ed Connick, of the Substation team, was high man with 147-379 in the Kilowatt League at Lucky Strike, but his team lost the odd game to the league-leading Transit aggregation, that was led by Perry Nutwell's 140 and 353.

Progressive Printing Co. increased its lead in the Graphic Arts League to 2½ games over Judd & Detweiler by winning all three from Stanford Paper, with Don Robbins high man, rolling a 163 game and 364 set. Herbie Cole was best for the E. A. Merkle team as it won three from Supplymen.

Eleanor Park's 135 was the best game of the night in the What's In a Name League at Lucky Strike, but her FCA No. 2 team lost the odd game to the sixth-place Standards.

The leading Condor five in the A. & P. League won two out of three from Eight o'clock at Lucky Strike Alleys, while the second-place Sultan team kept pace with a like triumph over Mayfair. Miss Mulligan's 128-365 was best as Self Service blanked Atlantics.

Bill Wood is accepting entries for the eleventh annual Meyer Davis Sweepstakes at Lucky Strike Saturday and Sunday, starting at 7:30 p. m. Lorraine Gulli is defending champion. The entry fee is $3, with the games free, a donation of Wood.

Wayne Oil Burner's 600 team game and 1,589 set was high for the night and took two games from Chapman in the Petroleum League at Columbia. Charles Guyther's 374 was high for the losers.

Bill Royal led the Capital Service team to a 2-1 triumph over Standard Oil, while Esso Burner won two games from Ott's Service Station, with McLarney high with 141-340. Logan Motors and Colonial Fuel won two games from Lehman and Limited Equipment and Supply, respectively.

Charles Beall, of FBI, had high game of the night in the Federal League at Arcadia while Frank Xanten, G. P. O., boasted high set of 401. FBI and National Capital Parks tied for high team game with 602, with set going to Federal Bureau of Investigation with 1,768.

Jim Falck and his Ordinance team gained a major share of the honors in the Navy Department League at Arcadia. Falck rolling 162 and 405 for individual honors, while Ordinance had high team set and a season's record of 1,772. Bureau of Engineering prevented a clean sweep with team game of 614.

Max Schmelings counted a 142 game and 395 set in the Southern Railway Clerks League at Arcadia, while his Brotherhood of Railway Clerks team had high team game and set of 579 and 1,661.

Bud Keefer and Lloyd Farmer featured last night's bowling at the Chevy Chase Alleys. Keefer, rolling for the Aces in the Chamber of Commerce League, held high individual game with 145, high individual set with 366, while the Aces team held high game and high set with 534 and 1,555, respectively.

In the Chevy Chase Commercial League, Farmer, of the A & P team, held high individual game and set with respective scores of 148 and 393. The A & P team held high team game with 582, and high team set with 1,690.

Mancini, a clever man with his dukes, is no newcomer to these precincts, although he has worked here only infrequently. He belted out Augue Kroll, of Baltimore, several months ago on his last trip to Washington and received a broken rib for his trouble. He kayoed Red Transparanti in four rounds here, beat Tommy Ricco and belted out Pete Powell.

Last Saturday night Mancini served notice that he must be reckoned with when the 126-pound laurels are divided by flattening Al Ragone in five rounds at Ridgewood Grove, New York.

Jimmy White, who had Eddie Alzek in tow last night, is anxious to bring back Abe (Ichabod) Denner, his string-beanish featherweight, since Denner gave Tony Dupre a severe massaging two weeks ago. With the victory went the New England featherweight title. Denner had Tony, who holds a decision over Petey Scalzo, incidentally, on the floor for a nine-count in the second round, and almost finished him in the tenth round. Dupre is quite willing to let the verdict stand and wants nothing more to do with Denner.

Griffith Plays Waiting Game As Baseball Trades Simmer

The Nats' president was in conversation with officials of the Detroit, St. Louis and Cleveland clubs today and tonight, but he was forced to await the outcome of deals in which the Washington club has no part, before talking trade on his own account.

Griffith has been merely shopping around since completing the Zeke Bonura deal with the Giants yesterday. The result of trades pending among the Tigers, Indians and Red Sox, is expected to govern Griffith's part in the dealing here.

Not until several deals now pending are completed, or fall through, will the Nats' owner be in a position to offer his wares, which consist chiefly of Shortstop Cecil Travis, Catcher Rick Ferrell, Outfielder Al Simmons and any of his pitchers.

Griffith denied that he had talked trade with the Tigers who are reported seeking Travis. "Of course I may get around to that," he said, "but if they want Travis they must come to me. I am not eager to let him go. But I'll always listen to any good offer."

The next member of the Nats to be disposed of is apt to be Al Simmons, Griffith admitted. "I asked waivers on Simmons before I left Washington last week-end, but have not heard if he has been claimed," said Griffith. "If he is waived out of the American League then I think a National League club will be interested in him."

The Tigers' offer for Travis will depend on the success of their brewing deal with the Cleveland Indians. Earl Averill, Lyn Lary and O'Dell Hale, of the Indians, and Pete Fox, Chet Laabs and Bill Rogell, of the Tigers, are purportedly involved in that deal. If the Tigers fail to acquire Lary and Hale they are expected to renew their attempts to pry Travis away from the Nats.

Griffith intimated that he would hold out for Rudy York in any deal with the Tigers in which Travis figured. He envisions York as protection both at first base and behind the bat.

Jim Londos Will Return

Champion Will Meet Winner of Mat Bout

Jim Londos, world international and European champion in all United States possessions and territories — Hoboken excepted, has agreed to meet the winner of Thursday night's one-night elimination contest next week at the Arena, Promoter Joe Turner announced last night.

LONDOS

Londos, commuting here regularly since regaining his diadem from Bronko Nagurski at Philadelphia some six weeks ago, tossed Man Mountain Dean for a goal a couple of cards back, and threatens to continue winning until spring—at least. All Jim is concerned about is the caliber of opposition. He likes to meet the best, because he works better against a good man. The uncouth preliminary boys can make the champ look bad at times.

Meanwhile, Thursday night's show assumes the proportions of a bargain bill, with Turner expecting between 14 and 16 entries, which would mean seven or eight bouts. All elimination jousts will be limited to 20 minutes, but the finalists will struggle over the regulation 90-minute distance.

Those who already have signified their intention of entering are Karl Davis, St. Louis blond, who is returning to this bailiwick after a prolonged absence; Nick Campofreda, former Western Maryland athlete; Tommy O'Toole, a broth of a lad from the old sod; Chief Little Wolfe; John Heracle, a 230-pound iron worker who once wrestled the best; Frenchy La Rue and "Dutch" Schultz—old man Satan himself.

Take Cage Battle, 21-16; Stop Threat

Victors Get Early Lead; Jim Kinsman Is Outstanding Star; Georgetown Light

By clinging to a fraction of its ample half-time lead, the cage force of Bethesda-Chevy Chase defeated Georgetown Prep yesterday by a 21-16 margin, keeping its record for two games played this season spotless. A full house of enthusiastic students packed the Bethesda gym for the contest.

Until midway of the first period either team might have won. The scoreboard was put to no use whatever. Several attempts were made to open the scoring, mostly by free throws, but nothing came of it until Hillery Hayden, brother of last year's regular Bethesda player, attempted a set-up shot with Prep's Chuck Devine hanging on his neck. The 2-pointer was good, and the referee gave Hayden an extra shot for good measure, which was also good. Bethesda finally led, 3-0.

Baskets by Jim Kinsman and Bob Whalen brought Bethesda up to a 7-0 lead before the Little Hoyas began clicking. Then George Bently sneaked in a snowbird, and Ben Decker dropped in a free throw. Bethesda was able to close out the initial period scoring, however, Dick Baursfield taking a long pass and scoring from directly under the basket.

A solitary foul shot was credited to Prep in the second quarter, while Bethesda added three field goals. The teams went to the dressing rooms with the Preppers trailing, 15-4. Whatever it was that Coach Ed Hargaden said to the hind-runners during the rest period evidently sank in deeply. They came out in a fighting frame of mind. Decker was the star of the period, sinking two field shots in rapid succession. He was aided by Devine and Powell in amassing seven points for the Preppers. Bethesda tallied but once.

Soon after the final quarter began, Georgetown brought the score to 14-17, with goals by Decker and Wimsett, but at that point the threat sagged. Bethesda added four points to keep its margin over the Little Hoyas, and the final whistle sounded with the high school lads holding a five-point margin.

Smith Declines Boston College, Holy Cross Jobs

Philadelphia, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—The Philadelphia Record, in a copyright story, said that Maurice J. (Clipper) Smith, Villanova College football coach, tonight rejected a three-year contract as head coach at Holy Cross College and also declined a similar offer from Boston College.

Smith, whose Villanova football teams have been tied but undefeated for two consecutive seasons, previously had turned down an offer from Loyola, of Los Angeles, the Record asserted.

The former Santa Clara mentor, who has coached Villanova for three years, was under a one-year contract here and therefore would not have broken any contracts by accepting another offer, the story said.

Billiard Expert Is Here Tonight

Joseph Diehl, sixth ranking pocket billiard player of the world, will appear in an exhibition match tonight at the Arcadia Billiard Parlors, Fourteenth and Park road northwest.

The match will start at 7:30 o'clock, with Diehl opposing a well-known local player in a 125-point game. Diehl was the Western champion titlist the past year.

Detroit Gets Hutchinson

Winter Horse Shows To Open at Ft. Myer

First of Series Tomorrow Night In Riding Hall; Army Officers, Students and Adult Civilians to Vie

By Hotspur.

As early as 7:30 tomorrow evening the riding hall at Fort Myer will be brilliantly lighted, the famous Third Cavalry Band will be playing a stirring air, gold-laced officers and handsomely gowned women will be assembled in the boxes and a multitude of much the same kind of people will be crowding the tiers of seats that extend from the ringside to the rafters of the great hall.

In the arena a detail of soldiers will be standing beside jumps and other obstacles designed to trick the best jumpers and the most skillful riders, important ring officials will be giving every last detail of the course a final inspection that all may be ready for "his honor" the horse.

A bugler, resplendent in an old-time uniform of the cavalry, will take his station in the center of the ring. The music of the band will be hushed and a clear clarion call will resound throughout the hall, signaling the opening of the 1938-39 winter horse show season, the first of a series of four shows given each of the four winter months.

Exhibition Drill Carded.

The program of six classes includes an exhibition by one of the crack drill units of the Fort Myer command. Also featured will be student team jumping, an event which last year proved to be one of the most exciting and enjoyable of the many hard fought classes.

This contest brings together teams from schools and colleges that will vie for the Arlington Hall Challenge Trophy, emblematic of college team jumping supremacy.

Last year this championship event, which is only decided after the scores made in the season's four shows are tallied, was won by the hard-riding cadets of the Pennsylvania Military Academy over the girls from Arlington Hall who turned in spectacular performances at each show. The team of the Virginia Military Institute was also a factor in this event.

There is a new entry in the student team jumping this year that comes from up near Philadelphia. The Valley Forge Military Academy will enter the lists and from all accounts will be a hard outfit to beat.

But to single out the students as the principal attraction would not be fair to the important timber-toppers of Washington and vicinity. All the distinguished company that makes up the laurel winning combinations of imposing horses and fearless riders of the "down country" section will be trying for the championships in both the jumping and hunting classes.

Jumps Are Difficult

The courses of jumps, the most difficult ever designed for a local indoor show, will not overawe such superior performers as Lisbeth Steig's Hi Ho, Charles Carrico's Recall and Hunger Marcher Margaret Cotter's reliable Rocksie, Fenton Fadeley's Headrock and Apple Jack, Mrs. Nancy MacDowell's Modern Melody and her daughter Elaine MacDowell's Gay Melody.

Other notables of the horse show ring that will be contestants are the grand horses of the Randle Stables and Fritz Kleeman's string of creditable performers.

Tigers Buy Hutchinson, Ace Hurler

Give Jo Jo White, Piet and 2 Other Players and Cash For Seattle Star

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 12.—Del Baker, manager of the Detroit Tigers, announced tonight the Tigers had bought Freddie Hutchinson, ace pitcher of the Seattle Club of the Pacific Coast League, for an unannounced sum of cash and four players, Outfielder Joyner (Jo-Jo) White and Infielder Tony Piet, of the Tigers; First Baseman George Archie, of the Toledo Mud Hens in the American Association, and Pitcher Ed Selway, of Beaumont, of the Texas League.

Hutchinson was regarded as the minor league prize of the year. The New York Yankees and the Pittsburgh Pirates sought him. Seattle was reported asking $50,000 cash, but said it wanted players more than money.

Baker, after announcing the deal, was enthusiastic about Hutchinson's prospects, "You bet we're glad to get him. We need a pitcher and everyone tells me this young fellow has the stuff."

The Tigers gave up a veteran outfielder in White, a fielding star on their pennant winning club of 1934 and the world champions of 1935. Piet, a fair infielder, has been in both major leagues.

Hutchinson, a right-hander, won 25 and lost 7 for Seattle last year

A Good Record

He won 25 and lost 7 games, for an average of .781. He won more games than any other hurler in the Pacific Coast League, and his earned run average was 2.48, better than any other pitcher working in as many games.

He appeared in 35 games and went the distance in 29 of them.

Besides his pitching, Hutchinson hit .313, driving in 23 runs, and collecting 13 doubles and two home runs. He often was used as a pinch hitter.

He faced 1,054 batters, being touched for 241 hits and 83 runs, 80 of which he was responsible for. He fanned 145 and walked 99.

Everything's Set For Big Trades

By Sid Feder,

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Dec. 12.—Baseball's bargain counters opened for business all over town today, but in most cases—including a rumored three-cornered American League deal involving Detroit, Cleveland and Boston—the activity was confined to sales talks.

There was much whispering as baseball men from all over the map gathered for tomorrow's start of the three-day major league meetings.

The trading, if there is going to be any, seemed to center around these situations:

1. Outfielder Earl Averill and Pitcher Denny Galehouse will go from the Indians to Detroit in return for Pete Fox, fly chaser, and Elden Auker, hurler. If the Boston Red Sox get into the deal, Outfielder Ben Chapman may move from Beantown.

2. The Cubs have something on the fire. "Pants" Rowland and Charlie Drake flitted around one hotel lobby in a determined man-

On Fishing

Our column today is an open letter to Max Chambers, secretary of the Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair Association, because of an editorial in the Preston News of December 8 under a heading of "Conservation" that says:

ACKERMAN.

"A number of requests have reached the News asking for a brief statement explaining the Conservation Program sponsored by the Outdoor Life Federation which is expected to be presented to the Legislature this winter.

"The Outdoor Life Federation plan calls for a new conservation commission of six members and control over all State outdoor activities including Chesapeake oyster, crab and fishing business. The Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair Association has announced its opposition.

"It would be interesting to know if the readers of the News are in favor of this program."

Dear Max: It will be interesting, not only to readers of the Maryland Preston News but as well to Washington anglers, and members of sportsmen's clubs in nearby Maryland, to know just what Eastern Shoremen think of the proposed conservation commission bill which will be introduced during the next session of the Maryland Legislature and which now is just being shaped up for presentation.

It will be interesting to these anglers because they have supported the Fishing Fair Association since its inception three years ago, thinking it to be an organization for the promotion of angling in the Chesapeake Bay country.

If they are not mistaken in their assumption, they will want to know why the Fishing Fair Association is opposing this proposed bill. Possibly you have ideas on it that we have missed over here. However, if it is only for the reason noted in the editorial, read your copy of the proposed bill over and note that it provides for a separate division for salt water fisheries, to be administered by capable appointees from the sections where the pursuit of crabbing, oystering and fishing is of primary commercial importance.

Anyway, local anglers would like to know why their Fishing Fair Association isn't for a movement, that has as its ultimate objective, not only better angling, but a better take for commercial men. Would you like to tell us about it possibly through this column, if you attach to this proposed bill the importance, anglers here, think it demands.

There are provisions in the bill nearby Maryland organizations don't care for, but they are not opposing the bill for that reason.

Instead, they are making a real effort to iron out the disputed points so that the movement will be a concerted drive by Marylanders from every section of the State to pass some kind of a bill that will give stream anglers well-stocked and patrolled streams that will give commercial oystermen and crabbers better take through better methods and education, and possibly provide a basis to get together with the Virginia commercial interests with whom they have been at sword's point for the past hundred years, so that the depleted natural resources of the bay country might again be built up to a semblance of their former opulence . . . that will allow all of the money paid to the State by sportsmen to be used for a furtherance of that sport and not allow it to go into the general fund and bring forth such proposals as the recent 5 per cent tax on shotgun shells to run the game department. A tax, by the way, that would only have hurt an allied sport, for 80 per cent of the shells exploded in Maryland are on skeet fields.

In short, sportsmen in this area want to make any kind of a start that in the end will bring to the angler and hunter, as well as commercial men, conditions comparable to those enjoyed in surrounding States, States which have recognized the fact that conservation commissions must be divorced from politics, if they are to give sportsmen an equitable return for the many millions of dollars they spend each year in the pursuit of their sport. You know, of course, of the hundreds of thousands of dollars spent by Washingtonians along the bay shore each year . . . that it isn't spent merely out of the goodness of their hearts . . . that if they can't find their sport there, the movement to hunt and fish farther afield in States where their patronage is appreciated, will grow and grow, until in all truth it will be "Maryland, My Maryland," but only for those who must of necessity stay close within her boundaries.

And that, Max, is just what we don't want. Instead we want to see the bay area built up under equitable administration until it becomes the finest fishing area anywhere along the Atlantic Coast.

Seabiscuit Voted Outstanding Race Horse of the Year

New York, Dec. 12 (U.P.)—Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit, conqueror of War Admiral in one of the most spectacular match races in turf history, today was proclaimed the outstanding race horse of 1938 in a Nation-wide poll of sports writers conducted by the Turf and Sport Digest, of Baltimore.

The rugged 5-year-old son of Hard Tack—Swing On was named champion over Samuel D. Riddle's Man o' War 4-year-old, War Admiral, which last year nosed out the Biscuit for the season's highest turf honor. Figured on the basis of three points for first position, two points for second and one point for third, Seabiscuit polled 698 points as against 489 for the Admiral in the voting.

Hemstead's Trainer Is Banned

Stewart Is Given 90-Day Suspension After Test Shows Horse Was 'Doped'

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 12.—Running over the heavy, sticky track like a scared rabbit, Pandoramint, a daughter of Brandon Mint and owned by E. H. Titmus, jr., led every inch of the way to take the fifth race, today's feature. The 3-year-old, making the third start of her career, was capably handled by Jockey Leon Garrett, Nashville, Tenn., boy. Pandoramint finished two lengths in advance of Star Mint with Teddy's Star third and brought her backers a $15.40 mutuel.

The first stimulating case of the fall season in this section was brought to light today with the announcement of the stewards that Trainer H. N. Stewart had been suspended for 90 days and his case referred to the racing commission. Stewart is the trainer of the horse, Tommy Rose, and the saliva test that day showed positive caffeine. Tommy Rose won the race but was disqualified. A few days later, the same horse won another race.

Tommy Rose, Nights End and Maple Tints, all owned by E. Hemstead, have been suspended, pending the naming of a trainer suitable to the stewards.

Three horses challenged Pandoramint as she circled the course for her first victory. Lead Please attempted to run with her and was shaken off. Teddy's Star then took up the chase but could do little more than cut down the leader's margin. Lastly, Star Mint made a bold effort but hung in the final stages. Star Mint, however, stumbled and almost lost Apprentice Bernhardt on the backstretch.

After roaming around in the clouds for several days, the daily-double returned to normal levels today with a $33.60 payoff. Photo finishes marked both ends of the twin transaction. Miss Wing barely got up to nip Tobias in the second race and paid an individual mutuel of $9.40. In the third race, Cautious Bo, with Garrett up, came through on the rail to get to the front and then outgamed Keyed Up. Cautious Bo paid $10 in his own right.

CHARLES TOWN CHARTS

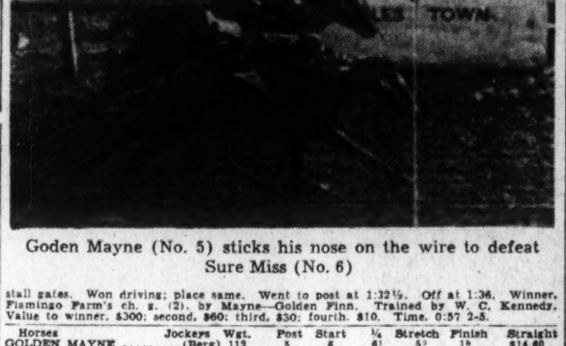
(Compiled by Walter Haight.)
WEATHER, CLOUDY; TRACK, HEAVY.

FIRST RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:32½. Off at 1:36. Winner, Flamingo Farm's ch. g. (2), by Mayne—Golden Finn. Trained by W. C. Kennedy. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:57 2-5.



Goden Mayne (No. 5) sticks his nose on the wire to defeat Sure Miss (No. 6)

LYCONNA	(Rossi)	107	1	5	1h	6²	7³	22.75
ANN GROUCHER	(Kirk)	108	7	1	7¹³	8	8	25.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN MAYNE, $31.20, $11.80, $7.20; SURE MISS, $3.20, $3.20; TIMETTA, $4.60.

GOLDEN MAYNE, slow to begin, came between horses while bettering his position, took command inside the sixteenth pole, but had to be kept to a drive to stave off the bid of SURE MISS. The latter, always forwardly placed, came again after losing the lead and was wearing down the winner on the inside. TIMETTA, off poorly and blocked at the far turn, came very wide and closed with a bold rush. KISSIN KID was squeezed back approaching the stretch and came gamely when clear. BEAMING LADY, last away, went to the leader with a bold move along the inside rail and faltered. LYCONNA was through early. ANN GROUCHER dropped out of it at once.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:11½. Off at 2:15. Winner, A. S. Hamilton, jr.'s gr. f. (4), by Tournament II—Alwington Dolly. Trained by A. S. Hamilton, jr. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:58 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS WING, $9.40, $4.40, $2.80; TOBIAS, $16.00, $7.00; STAND BY, $2.80.

MISS WING, off alertly and closest to the pace of TOBIAS, came gamely under punishment in the closing stages and was up in the final strides. TOBIAS was hard ridden on the inside while setting the pace, swerved into STAND BY when placed to punishment in the stretch and closed gamely. STAND BY, first away, dropped back early, moved up boldly on the inside, but was forced to pull up while in close quarters along the rail. MERIGA closed some ground. ELEGANT DAME had early speed and stopped.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:40½. Off at 2:41. Winner, J. F. Donaldson's ch. g. (6), by Botanical—Cautious. Trained by F. M. Johnson. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:36 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAUTIOUS BO, $10.00, $5.60, $3.20; KEYED UP, $9.00, $5.00; HI-BEN, $3.40.

CAUTIOUS BO, forwardly placed from the start, came through on the inside in the early stretch and drew out to win under intermittent punishment. KEYED UP was sent to the leaders with a bold rush along the backstretch and finished with good courage on the extreme outside. HI-BEN disposed of FLICKAMARU to get to the front, but weakened suddenly in the closing test. FLICKAMARU went evenly after setting the early pace. LAPIS was allowed to drop back going to the first turn and rallied mildly. WANTED was hard ridden.

Daily Double, Miss Wing and Cautious Bo, Paid $33.60.

FOURTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:10½. Off at 3:13½. Winner, I. J. Collins' b. g. (3), by Chance Shot—Psyche. Trained by L. C. Everitt. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:39 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FYLFOT, $33.40, $10.80, $5.40; EBLIS, $8.00, $3.80; WHIZZAWAY, $3.20.

FYLFOT set a good pace, continued gamely when displaced by EBLIS in the stretch, but rallied to be up in the final strides. EBLIS followed closest to the pace, was rated to the stretch, took command when placed to a drive, but weakened suddenly in the final 15 yards. WHIZZAWAY was a tiring third. JABBERIE closed some ground. MOON HARVEST failed to threaten at any stage. CALEB stumbled and lost his rider entering the stretch.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:39½. Off at 3:40½. Winner, E. H. Titmus, jr.'s ch. f. (3), by Brandon Mint—Curiosity Box. Trained by S. Flammia. Value to winner, $360; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:29 1-5.

RIPPLING RAY	(Law)	106	6	5	6²	7	7	7	35.10

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PANDORAMINT, $15.40, $5.60, $3.00; STAR MINT, $4.00, $2.80; TEDDYS STAR, $3.20.

PANDORAMINT, first away, set a good pace while saving ground and held sway to the end under intermittent punishment. STAR MINT, unable to get a forward position in the opening stages, stumbled and almost lost his rider on the backstretch, recovered to reach serious contention, but hung right at the end. TEDDYS STAR was hard ridden throughout and faltered at the close. CANROCK went evenly. The others were outrun.

SIXTH RACE (Substitute)—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:06½. Off at 4:10½. Winner, L. L. Lehman's b. g. (6), by Felstead—Half Awake. Trained by C. W. Smith. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:57 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FELAWAKE, $13.80, $7.20, $6.80; TRANSMAC, $11.80, $6.00; PEGOTTY ANN, $6.00.

FELAWAKE, a forward factor from the start, came wide for racing room and, under good handling, was up in the final stride. TRANSMAC, fractious at the post and started outside the gate, was probably best. He was off poorly and came very wide entering the stretch to close boldly on the outside. PEGOTTY ANN shook off BUDS VIRMAR to get to the front, drew out, but weakened suddenly in the closing sixteenth. DOC OSTER went evenly, but could not threaten seriously. ADRIATIC closed with a rush after trailing to the stretch. BUDS VIRMAR quit.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 4:41. Off at 4:41. Winner, G. T. Strother's b. g. (6), by Bucellas—Nella R. Trained by J. Arthur. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 2:12 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE WACKIE, $8.20, $3.60, $2.80; FREE, $3.20, $2.40; AUFOIN, $4.80.

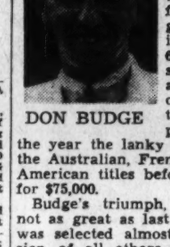
LITTLE WACKIE, steadied along close to the pace to the backstretch, disposed of AUFOIN and HARD CHASE to take command, shook off the challenge of FREE entering the stretch, but was rated during the early stages, went to to draw far out and win easily. FREE was rated during the early stages, went to to draw far out and win easily, but weakened thereafter. AUFOIN ran HARD CHASE into defeat, but weakened badly. THE others were outrun.

Sports Poll Gives Budge Top Ranking

Henry Armstrong Runs Close Second In Nation-wide Balloting

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 12.—For his unprecedented achievements on the tennis court, Don Budge again tops the list as the country's foremost athlete of 1938.



DON BUDGE

In a Nation-wide poll conducted by the Associated Press, the red-thatched Californian, was given top ranking by 26 of the 63 participating sports writers and enough seconds and thirds to roll up 122 points. During the year the lanky tennis ace won the Australian, French, British and American titles before turning pro for $75,000.

Budge's triumph, however, was not as great as last year, when he was selected almost to the exclusion of all others. This time he was given a battle right down to the final ballots by Henry Armstrong, great Negro fighter, who likewise created history by holding the featherweight, lightweight and weiterweight championships at the same time.

Tabulated results:

	Firsts.	Points.
Don Budge, tennis	26	122
Henry Armstrong, boxing	19	104
Johnny Vander Meer, baseball	8	37
Davey O'Brien, football	2	28
Glenn Cunningham, track	3	16
Ralph Guldahl, golf	1	14
Sam Snead, golf	1	13½
Joe Louis, boxing	0	9
Hank Greenberg, baseball	1	8
Jimmie Foxx, baseball	1	6

War Admiral Will Race During 1939

By the United Press.

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 12.—War Admiral, the greatest son of Man O' War, will return to racing in 1939, Samuel D. Riddle, his owner said here tonight.

The great colt, runner-up to Seabiscuit for 1938 turf honors, was to have been retired to stud after the Widener Handicap in March. Because of his great physical condition, however, it was decided that he would remain on the turf for at least another year.

44,000 Owners Clear List Rises 1,500 a Day Nevada's Record Best

By Thomas M. Cahill.

"Paid in full" has been written by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation across accounts totaling more than $100,000,000 and it has checked from its books the names of 44,000 home owners who just a few years ago faced the loss of their homes through foreclosure. The list of fully liquidated accounts is growing at a rate of 1,500 a month, which is already 50 per cent above the rate hoped for originally for 10 years from now, Charles A. Jones, general manager of the corporation, announces.

"Although these borrowers were unable to get private credit and were faced with foreclosure and loss of their homes only a few years ago, they have proved that all they needed was a chance to get on their feet," Mr. Jones said. "They are, of course, the most fortunate of the million home owners aided by the corporation, but there are hundreds of thousands of others, more than 725,000 of them, in fact, who are definitely on the way out of their difficulties.

HOLC Helps

"It should be remembered, however, that the great majority of those 725,000 still need to be guided to complete home ownership; and, in addition, there are more than 132,000 others who still are doing their utmost to rehabilitate themselves. On our ability to grant them leniency and consideration, and to help find solutions for their problems, rests their chance finally to 'come through.' It is only because the majority are getting on their feet that we are able to help those most unfortunate, without a heavy burden on taxpayers and the Treasury. Thus far the corporation is carrying on its work through its own revenues alone."

Ohio leads the Nation in the number and amount of paid-in-full loans, Mr. Jones reported. In proportion to the number and amount of loans made, however, the real leaders are Nevada and New Hampshire, which reports respectively more than one-eighth and one-tenth of all their loans fully liquidated.

Local Housing Loans

Since February and up to early this month local banks have granted 2,587 loans under title I of the national housing act for the financing of repair, alteration and modernization of properties in Washington, records of the District of Columbia Bankers Association reveal.

Interest in these loans has been sustained throughout that part of the year since the National Housing act amendment became effective and Federal Housing Administration assistance was resumed. In the week of October 31 there was a record number of loans, 135 being the aggregate for all local banking institutions.

Mild fall weather was advantageous for repair, alteration and modernization and resulted in more work of this type than is usually apparent in the autumnal season. During the six weeks prior to December 2 loans of this type have averaged 89 a week.

During the present year Washington banks have co-operated generously with the movement by extending loans to all qualified applicants in an effort to assist the building and allied industries, and the results of the endeavor have been most gratifying to all concerned.

Reports from the Federal Housing Administration up to October 31 disclose that 2,456 title I loans, aggregating $1,099,087 in volume, had been made from February 3 by all leading agencies with headquarters in the District of Columbia. During the same period 1,825 title I loans for a total of $796,432 were made on

Cotton Firm On Quota Vote

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—Moderate advances in cotton in response to the favorable Southern vote on cotton marketing quotas Saturday attracted realizing today. March sold off from 8.30 to 8.16 and closed at 8.21, with final prices 7 points net higher to 5 lower.

The market opened 2 to 6 points higher in sympathy with firmness at Liverpool and the 84 per cent favorable cotton referendum in the South Saturday. A New York cotton exchange service estimate that domestic consumption in November amounted to 620,000 bales against 543,000 in October and 485,000 in November last year also helped buying. Advances were extended to net gains of 6 to 9 points during the morning, but at these levels Liverpool selling and realizing developed. Early buyers resold later when deliveries from March forward sold off to net losses of 6 to 10 points.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil met with partial setbacks near the close after early steadiness today. Final prices were 4 points higher to 3 net lower. Mill interests were credited with buying July against sales of crude oil. Sales, 46 contracts. Crude oil was 6¼ in the Southeast and valley. The Census Bureau report tomorrow is expected to show consumption in November of 263,209 barrels. December closed 7.47; January, 7.46; March, 7.56; May, 7.66; July, 7.77.

Grains Drop With Fading Of U. S. Exports

But Canada Sells 1½ Million Bu. Wheat; Corn Prices Lower

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—Handicapped by disappointing absence of any fresh export demand either for United States wheat or corn, both grains showed fractional losses today at the last.

In sharp contrast was European purchasing of 1,500,000 bushels of Canadian wheat. Although approximately 500,000 bushels of wheat from this country were reported taken by British millers, it was apparently part of an amount bargained for some time ago.

Transient advances of about a cent a bushel in the Chicago wheat market waned soon when the fact became apparent that there was a notable dearth of follow-up buying, and that trade volume in all the speculative pits had dwindled to nearly zero.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ⅜ lower compared with Saturday's finish, December, 64@64⅛; May, 66⅞@66¾. Corn, ⅛ to ½ down; December, 50½; May, 52⅝@52¾. Oats ⅛ up; rye, varying from ⅛ off to ¼ gain, and provisions showing 5 to 15 cents drop.

Commercial Loans Take Upward Turn

Commercial, industrial and agricultural loans or banks turned upward in the week ended December 7 after three weeks of small declines.

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that business loans of banks in 101 leading cities increased $15,000,000 to $3,881,000,000 during the week. The increases occurred chiefly in the Chicago and San Francisco districts. The volume in New York City was unchanged.

Early Rally Fails to Hold Seasonal Store Buying Under Estimates Market Indications Not Definite

New York, Dec. 12.—A modest rally in the stock market today did not carry the average of the list to the high made last week. Prices backed away when they neared this point and the close was near the lows of the session. In other words the market is still held within the narrow bounds of the last few weeks, with no indication of the direction it will take when it finally breaks away. Trading was on the meager side, amounting to only 899,305 shares. The composite average showed a net advance of 0.20 point, with steels and aviations turning in the best performance but fractional changes predominating in the list of most active stocks.

The market enjoyed a firm opening and bettered its prices around noon. Announcement of the lower rate for steel operations for this week brought in some selling in the afternoon even though the steel group was less vulnerable to this selling than the other groups. Rails were called upon to absorb some pressure and declines marked up for equipments and the store issues. The latter usually enjoy a rally at this time of year but reports thus far indicate that shoppers are doing plenty of looking but not their normal amount of buying in their Christmas shopping. Oils and utilities were little changed.

Steel Output Slackens

The steel figures, which constitute the most important of the indices of the beginning of a week, confirmed expectations of a tapering off. The rate for the industry this week will be 57.6 per cent of capacity compared with 59.9 per cent last week. New business has been slackening but the industry is offering strong resistance to the normal year-end letdown. The trade looks for only a moderate decline from this level over the holidays.

Other lines of business are following steel in reflecting the year-end curtailment and representative services note that in a number of major lines production has caught up with demand, thus promising a temporary dip in activity over the next month or two.

The followers of steel shares were not disappointed by the operations report and this group enjoyed a good demand. United States Steel was active and added ⅝, while Bethlehem and Republic also edged higher.

Aviation Shares Active

There was another flurry in the aviations on indications that aircraft production will be kept at its present high rate until the Government has carried out its major program for the Army and Navy. Most active of this group was North American Aviation, up a small fraction, followed by United Aircraft, which gained nearly a point. Douglas added 1⅜ but inactive; Wright Aero dropped 1½.

Individual features in today's market included the preferred issues of National Supply, which last week reduced its dividend. The issues were heavily sold on the announcement but apparently some more selling was to be accommodated, for the $2 preferred dropped a point today and the $5½ preferred dropped 6 points, each to a new low. Paramount Pictures stepped out as the day's most active stock, adding a small fraction, and there was good support for Greyhound. Motors were slightly higher, and Goodyear led the tire division.

Bond Trading Higher

Listed bond trading was fairly active today, with the undertone good. United States Treasury obligations remained in demand, and three of the bond issues attained fresh highs for the year. Best grade corporate bonds were well maintained, and investment bankers reported good progress in distribution of available new issues. Among speculative bonds most changes favored the holders, but there also were some declines. The foreign dollar section was dull and mostly lower. Trading in all issues totaled $8,170,000.

Treasury Issues Gain

Not much formal trading was done in Treasury issues, but the counter market was active. The new bonds and notes to be issued on Thursday were traded heavily, on the customary when-issued basis. Among outstanding issues, the intermediate datings were in best request and new highs appeared in that group, although gains ranged only to 10-32 point, guaranteed issues of the Farm and Home Corporations also improved.

Highest rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were steady at former levels. Among secondary rail bonds fractional advances were the rule, but a few larger gains also appeared. Rail and utility holding bonds were in good demand, with utilities power and light issues especially strong. Industrial convertibles turned upward on the modest strength in equities. Local tractions showed more gains than losses, and in other special groups the tone likewise was firm.

German bonds were dull in the foreign section and other defaulted Europeans were similarly neglected. The Latin-American variety of disregarded pledges continue to drift idly. Italian bonds steadied at the levels to which they were forced by the recent war talk, while Japanese issues were soft. Argentine bonds remained weak in the high grade section, and some bonds were at lowest levels of the year. Other high-grade foreigns were motionless.

U. S. Spending Heads Toward Peace Time Top

9.093 Billion for Year Income Above, Deficit Below Estimate

New York, Dec. 12.—Spending by the Government during the first four months of the current fiscal year was at practically as high a rate as that planned for in the 1938-1939 budget made public last July, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. This suggests that annual expenditures this year will reach the budget estimate of $9,093,000,000, or the highest figure for any peace-time year in the history of the country.

Receipts during the first four months were above the rate anticipated in the budget and the deficit consequently fell below the indicated figure. The present outlook is, however, that receipts will not continue to be maintained at the current rate. Next March, for instance, income tax receipts will be lower as the result of the 1938 business recession.

It may thus be expected that the annual deficit for the current fiscal year will equal the budget estimate of $40,085,000,000. This means that the public debt at the end of the current year will reach the record high figure of $40,650,000,000, an increase of $24,624,000,000 over the post-war low of $16,026,000,000 on December 31, 1930.

◇ K Q 10 8 3	◇ 9
♣ none	♣ A Q J 9 7 6 3

North's hand is not equal to a two bid, according to the way most players use the two-demand, the rule being that more high card tricks than losers should be held. However, presuming North does open with a forcing-two, the bidding might proceed like this:

North	East	South	West
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

East leads a heart.

Good Play for Six

There is a reasonably good play for six spades. Declarer's plan should be to set up his diamond suit, throwing his losing heart on the club ace. After winning the heart trick in his hand, he should lay down the king of diamonds, losing to the ace. If a spade is returned, he should win in his own hand, lead a low diamond, and trump in the dummy, play the ace of clubs, discarding the heart and enter his hand with either a heart lead or a club ruff. He should play another low diamond and ruff with the queen of trumps and return to his hand with the entry he did not use the time before. He now draws trumps and plays for the jack of diamonds to drop under the queen.

Today's Hand

North, South vulnerable.

North dealer.

	♠ J 9 6 ♡ A 6 2 ◇ 8 ♣ K 10 8 7 6 3
♠ 4 ♡ 7 5 ◇ 10 9 6 5 4 2 ♣ A Q 5 4	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ Q 10 7 5 3 ♡ K J 9 8 4 3 ◇ A 7 ♣ none
	♠ A K 8 2 ♡ Q 10 ◇ K Q J 3 ♣ J 9 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	3 ♡	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: 7 ♡.

L. E. M. contributes today's hand as an object lesson to others, warning them against too optimistic opening bids and raises of four-card suits.

North and South reached a four-spade contract through a birdseed opening plus a raise of a four-card suit with but three trumps, and not surprisingly they were doubled and defeated 1,100 points. If they had played the hand at no-trump they could have made game.

The bidding as it took place is given in the box along with the hand. North must be blamed for the fiasco. In the first place, he did not have an opening bid. An ace and a king under no system, except as a psychic, are considered sufficient values upon which to open the bidding. His second error lay in raising his partner's spade bid to two with only three trumps. He must take into consideration that his partner may be bidding on a four-card suit, and seven trumps are not enough to control a hand, particularly when there is a strong suit adversely held. His third error was in raising to four.

North's best response to his partner's spade bid is two clubs. This is a weak rebid and will partially amend for his atrocious opening. If the auction continues with East bidding two hearts and South going to three diamonds, North can now muster courage to say three no-trump. After the bad start, however, North can thank his lucky stars if the price is anything less than 1,100.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

NOW Miss Pauline Harrell, an assistant clerk in the Section of Budget Accounts, Agricultural Economics, is nominated for the title of "Miss Civil Service." Miss Harrell, an attractive girl, has worked in the department three years and is thoroughly efficient and otherwise highly qualified for the title, which goes, as you know, to the feminine employe in the District of Columbia who appears to the judges as being the ideal civil service employe. We have pleasure in presenting her picture.

MISS HARRELL

In the mail that brought the nomination of Miss Harrell (who, incidentally, came here from Atlanta, Ga.), is a nomination from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, as follows:

"I wish to nominate Miss Hope Weaver, an employe of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, as 'Miss Civil Service.' As an associate of her's in this branch of the civil service, I have found her to be sincere, pleasant to work with and conscientious and efficient in her work as printer's assistant." It is a pleasure to include her, and will Miss Weaver come in so we can get her photograph?

WHY don't they organize themselves before re-organizing the Government?

The fact that so many people were shooting at so many different targets accounted in some measure for the defeat of the last reorganization bill. That there was a haphazard approach is evidenced by the rewriting of the bill eight times and that no one looked to a great co-ordination of effort is further evidenced by the fact that no hearing was held in the House at all and only a fleeting one in the Senate.

At least one responsible source expressed belief yesterday that if all parties concerned in governmental reorganization would hold a meeting of minds with a sincere effort to give and take and finally settle on a workable and generally acceptable bill, all the furore that attended the last effort would dissolve and reorganization, which is needed, would come about.

But, even in this season of Santa Claus, such a thing is too much for hope, it was thought. For the parties to such a meeting of minds would include all the organizations pledged to good government; the organizations pledged to the support of Federal employes; certain New Deal Congressmen; the President who has offered one reorganization bill and perhaps Senator Byrd, who, on Saturday, cried out against these "nine years of fiscal insanity."

The thought that a premeeting of minds—as a safeguard against another barrage of telegrams and general rumpus—is necessary was doubled after Senator Byrd's announcement of his five-point retrenchment program which would include a thorough-going governmental reorganization. For there would be a measure which more than likely would run crosswise to the proposed reorganization bill the President says he will introduce. It brings up the thought that fanfare and rumpus are again in the offing and somewhere between the two measures needed reforms in the Government will get a terrific squeeze, along with the many employe problems which require a dispassionate threshing out.

In any event, it is plain that a lot of grief and time could be saved if they would all talk reorganization over. The public reaction to certain phases of reorganization are too well known—and there is little reason why, with all the experience, they couldn't adopt a generally satisfactory measure. But, of course, they won't get together on it.

Notes: The Bureau of Internal Revenue has made changes and improvements in income tax forms for the taxable year 1938. The individual tax return for net income of more than $5,000 from salaries, wages, dividends, annuities and incomes from other sources, regardless of amounts, will be folded at the top instead of the side as in 1937. Which may be an improvement, but it's hard to see what it has to do with all the fractions, deductions and general confusion confoundedness that can't be figured out—whether the paper is folded at the top, bottom or side.

The camp for Federal employes—that the National Park Service is building in the tall Catoctins—should be ready by June 15. As related here last week, this camp seems one of the most attractive employe ventures to date. Meanwhile, the two established camps—near the site of the camp being built for employes—are available to responsible organizations.

Bob Burns Says—

Somehow, I have the feeling that you people are my friends and I feel like I can pour my heart out to you sometimes, without you gettin' the idea I'm squawkin'. Anyhow, I do get pretty blue sometimes when so many people come up to me with a handshake and always wind up by wantin' somethin' out of me. That's the reason I went home to my own people not along ago.

The very first day Uncle Fud called me up and told me to come over because he had a new dog. When I saw the dog in the yard he looked so big and fierce that I stopped at the gate. Uncle Fud says, "Come on in." I says, "Are you sure the dog won't bite?" He says, "That's why I sent for you. I jest got the dog today and I want to see if he'll bite strangers!"

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Striped Chipmunk Makes Up His Mind

Who, right or wrong, makes up his mind
—Old Mother Nature.

Tommy, Sue and Sammy were out reading records written in the snow. At least Tommy was reading them. Whether he was actually reading them or making them up the others were at first not sure. They had followed Black Pussy's track to the old stonewall on the edge of the Old Orchard. She had sat down in the snow. Then she had seen something that had caused her to creep forward rapidly. She had stopped again close to the old wall, and right there on the wall were small footprints in the snow which Tommy said Striped Chipmunk had made.

"How do you know they are Striped Chipmunk's?" Sammy wanted to know.

"If you know so much about what happened perhaps you can tell if Black Pussy caught him," said Sammy.

"Of course. That is easy," replied Tommy. "You can see for yourself that she didn't jump up on the wall. She merely stood up to smell between the stones. There are her tracks leading off into the Old Orchard. If she had caught Striped Chipmunk we would have found her tracks returning, for when she makes a catch of that kind she always takes it up to the house to show off her prize. No, Black Pussy didn't make a kill this time."

"So he is," replied Tommy. "But he isn't such a long or so heavy a sleeper as some of the others and he does wake up now and then for a bite to eat and hasty look outside. You know we haven't had any very cold weather and this is almost the first snow. I have an idea we won't see him again very soon."

That very thought was in the mind of Striped Chipmunk at that very minute. He was down in his snug, warm underground bedroom and he had made up his mind. He had been a long time doing it, but he had done it now.

When he had awakened early that morning he had done a lot of stretching and yawning. The truth is he had been asleep for some time. He really was beginning his winter sleep without knowing it. Because of the warm weather he had been active much later than usual. He was like the boy or girl who sits up later than usual—sleepy but not willing to admit it. So he kept waking often and when he did he always went out to run about a bit and see what was going on. He just couldn't make up his mind to the fact that it was time to retire for the winter—that winter had really arrived. That was why he kept waking up.

This morning he had awakened without sensing that there was any difference. There was no change down there in his bedroom. It was no warmer and no colder than usual. So after stretching and yawning he hopped up and scampered along his galleries on his way up to the old stonewall. When he poked his head out he gasped and he blinked.

"Black Pussy!" gasped Striped Chipmunk. He scampered straight back to his snug bedroom, and as he entered it he knew right then and there that at last he was ready to sleep. If his friends wanted cold weather and ice and snow they were welcome, but he didn't. No, sir, he didn't. He had made up his mind to that. He would go back to sleep and wake up only now and then for a bite to eat until winter was over.
